Bu kitap nasıl kullanılır?

Özgün YDS Denemeleri Set 2, YDS'nin soru türlerini, sırasını ve süresini birebir izleyen beş tam deneme içerir. Kitaptaki tüm cümleler, parçalar ve sorular Netfener için yazılmıştır; ÖSYM sınavlarından ya da başka yayınlardan alınmış soru yoktur.

1. Gerçek koşullar. Her denemeyi 180 dakikada, tek oturumda ve telefonsuz çöz. Deneme açılış sayfasındaki önerilen süreler, zamanını bölümlere göre planlamana yardım eder.

2. Cevap kâğıdı. Cevaplarını her denemenin sonundaki cevap kâğıdına işaretle; sınavdaki gibi kitapçık üzerinde değil, ayrı kâğıtta çalışma alışkanlığı kazan.

3. Kontrol ve takip. Cevap anahtarıyla kontrol et, doğru sayını ve puanını takip tablosuna yaz. Bölüm bazında ilerlemen hangi konuya yoğunlaşman gerektiğini gösterir.

4. Çözümler. Her sorunun neden doğru olduğu ve çeldiricilerin neden yanlış olduğu Türkçe açıklanır. Yanlışlarını okuyup soruyu yeniden çözmeden bir sonraki denemeye geçme.

Almost every living thing, from bacteria to humans, has an internal clock that follows a cycle of roughly twenty-four hours. This circadian rhythm regulates when we feel sleepy or alert, as well as body temperature, hormone levels and digestion. It is kept in time mainly (17) ---- daylight, which signals to the brain whether it is day or night. Problems arise when our daily routines conflict with this internal clock. Night-shift workers, (18) ----, must stay awake when their bodies are preparing for sleep and sleep when their bodies expect to be active. Over time, this mismatch has been linked to a higher risk of heart disease, diabetes and certain cancers. Even people who do not work at night may experience a milder version of the problem, sometimes called 'social jet lag', (19) ---- they stay up late and sleep in at weekends but wake early for work during the week. Researchers suggest that keeping regular sleep times and getting plenty of natural light in the morning can help to keep the internal clock (20) ---- track. Some employers are also experimenting with shift patterns designed to cause (21) ---- disruption as possible.

In the middle of the fourteenth century, a plague known as the Black Death swept across Europe, killing between a third and a half of the population in just a few years. The immediate consequences were devastating, but historians have also identified some surprising long-term effects. (22) ---- so many workers had died, labour became scarce, and surviving peasants were able to demand higher wages and better conditions. Landowners and governments tried to (23) ---- wages at their previous levels through new laws, but these were difficult to enforce. In some regions, the shortage of labour contributed to the decline of serfdom, a system (24) ---- peasants were legally bound to work on their lord's land. The plague also encouraged changes in medicine and public health, (25) ---- cities began to introduce quarantine measures for ships and travellers. Some historians even argue that the labour shortage encouraged the development of labour-saving technologies, (26) ---- others consider this claim difficult to prove.

On a remote Norwegian island, about thirteen hundred kilometres from the North Pole, a tunnel leads deep into a frozen mountain. At its end lies the Svalbard Global Seed Vault, which stores more than a million samples of seeds from crops around the world. The vault is designed as a backup for the roughly seventeen hundred seed banks that exist in different countries, many of which are vulnerable to war, natural disasters, power cuts or simple mismanagement. Its location was chosen carefully: the permafrost keeps the seeds frozen even if the cooling system fails, and the site is high enough above sea level to remain dry even if polar ice melts. Countries that deposit seeds retain ownership of them and are the only ones allowed to withdraw them. The first withdrawal took place in 2015, when researchers whose seed bank near Aleppo had been damaged by the war in Syria retrieved samples in order to rebuild their collection. This event demonstrated that the vault is not merely symbolic but serves a practical purpose.

43. According to the passage, the main purpose of the Svalbard vault is to ----.

A) replace all national seed banks around the world

B) develop new varieties of crops for cold climates

C) sell seeds to farmers in developing countries

D) act as a safety copy for seed collections held in other countries

E) store seeds that belong to the Norwegian government

44. The location of the vault was chosen partly because ----.

A) it is the closest place on Earth to the North Pole

B) Norway has more seed banks than any other country

C) the frozen ground would protect the seeds even if the cooling system stopped

D) the island is easy to reach from most countries

E) the site is below sea level and therefore protected

45. It is stated in the passage that seeds stored in the vault ----.

A) become the property of Norway once they are deposited

B) are regularly sold to researchers in other countries

C) must be replaced with new samples every year

D) are available to anyone who needs them

E) can only be withdrawn by the countries that deposited them

46. The author mentions the withdrawal made in 2015 in order to ----.

A) criticise the management of seed banks in Syria
B) explain why the vault was built in Norway
C) argue that more seed banks should be built in war zones
D) suggest that the vault is mainly a symbol of hope
E) show that the vault has proved useful in a real situation

47 – 50. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

Confirmation bias is the tendency to search for, interpret and remember information in a way that supports what we already believe. It affects almost everyone, regardless of intelligence or education. In one classic study, people who either supported or opposed the death penalty were shown the same two research reports, one suggesting that it reduced crime and the other suggesting that it did not. Rather than moving closer together, both groups became more convinced of their original views. Each side judged the study that agreed with it to be well designed and found faults in the other. Psychologists believe that confirmation bias exists partly because it saves mental effort: re-examining our beliefs every time we encounter new information would be exhausting. However, it can have serious consequences in areas such as medicine, where a doctor who forms an early diagnosis may overlook symptoms that point to a different illness. One strategy for reducing the bias is to actively look for evidence that could prove one's own view wrong.

47. According to the passage, confirmation bias ----.

A) affects only people with little education
B) makes people change their opinions very easily
C) is found mainly among doctors and scientists
D) leads people to favour information that matches their existing beliefs
E) helps people to evaluate evidence objectively

48. The study about the death penalty showed that ----.

A) the same evidence made both groups more certain of their original opinions
B) most participants changed their minds after reading the reports
C) the two research reports reached the same conclusion
D) people who supported the death penalty were more intelligent
E) neither group was interested in the research reports

49. According to psychologists, one reason why confirmation bias exists is that ----.

A) most information we receive is unreliable
B) people are rarely exposed to opposing views
C) it helps doctors make accurate diagnoses
D) constantly questioning our beliefs would require too much mental effort
E) intelligent people are better at ignoring evidence

50. The example of the doctor illustrates that confirmation bias ----.

A) is less common in medicine than in other fields
B) helps doctors reach a diagnosis more quickly
C) can easily be avoided with more experience
D) is caused by a lack of medical knowledge
E) can lead to important information being overlooked

51 – 54. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

As freshwater supplies come under increasing pressure, many countries are turning to desalination, the process of removing salt from seawater. Today, more than twenty thousand desalination plants operate worldwide, supplying drinking water to hundreds of millions of people, particularly in the Middle East and North Africa. Most modern plants use a method called reverse osmosis, in which seawater is forced at high pressure through membranes that allow water molecules to pass but block salt. Although this technique is far more efficient than older methods based on boiling, it still requires large amounts of energy, making desalinated water considerably more expensive than water from rivers or underground sources. Desalination also produces a highly concentrated salty waste known as brine. When brine is pumped back into the sea, it can sink to the seabed and harm marine life by reducing oxygen levels. Engineers are therefore exploring ways to power plants with solar energy and to extract useful minerals from brine, which could make the process both cheaper and less damaging.

51. It is stated in the passage that reverse osmosis ----.

A) removes salt from seawater by boiling it
B) pushes seawater through membranes that separate water from salt
C) uses less energy than any other water supply method
D) was the earliest method of desalination
E) produces water that is cheaper than river water

52. According to the passage, desalinated water is expensive mainly because ----.

A) seawater contains harmful chemicals
B) the process consumes a great deal of energy
C) most plants are located in remote areas
D) membranes must be replaced every day
E) brine has to be transported long distances

53. The passage suggests that brine can damage marine environments by ----.

A) lowering the amount of oxygen near the seabed
B) raising the temperature of the sea
C) attracting large numbers of predators
D) blocking sunlight from reaching the water
E) increasing the amount of plastic in the sea

54. According to the last sentence, engineers hope to ----.

A) reduce both the cost and the environmental impact of desalination
B) replace desalination with water from underground sources
C) stop pumping brine into the sea altogether
D) build desalination plants only in the Middle East
E) use brine as drinking water

The idea that people can be divided into 'left-brained' and 'right-brained' types is one of the most persistent myths in popular psychology. According to this view, left-brained people are logical and analytical, while right-brained people are creative and intuitive. The myth has its origins in genuine research. In the 1960s, scientists studying patients whose brain hemispheres had been surgically separated to treat severe epilepsy discovered that the two halves of the brain specialise in different tasks; language, for instance, is processed mainly in the left hemisphere in most people. However, the claim that individuals rely more heavily on one side has not been supported. A large study that analysed brain scans of more than a thousand people found no evidence that some individuals use one hemisphere more than the other overall. In healthy people, the two halves are connected by millions of nerve fibres and work together on almost every task. Creativity, in particular, appears to depend on networks that span both hemispheres.

55. According to the passage, the idea of left-brained and right-brained people ----.

A) has been confirmed by recent brain scan studies
B) was invented by writers with no scientific background
C) explains why some people suffer from epilepsy
D) is a popular belief that is not supported by evidence
E) is accepted by most psychologists today

56. It can be understood from the passage that the research of the 1960s ----.

A) proved that some people use only one side of the brain
B) showed that the two halves of the brain have different specialities
C) was carried out on people with no medical problems
D) found that creativity is located in the right hemisphere
E) demonstrated that language is processed equally by both halves

57. The large study mentioned in the passage found that ----.

A) most people are either left-brained or right-brained
B) the two hemispheres are not connected in healthy people
C) creative people have larger right hemispheres
D) people do not generally use one hemisphere more than the other
E) brain scans cannot measure activity in the hemispheres

58. According to the last sentence, creativity ----.

A) is controlled entirely by the left hemisphere
B) relies on networks across both sides of the brain
C) cannot be studied with brain scans
D) is found only in right-brained people
E) depends mainly on language skills

Public libraries, museums and archives around the world are digitising their collections at an unprecedented rate. Millions of books, manuscripts, photographs and maps that were once accessible only to those who could travel to a particular building can now be viewed online by anyone with an internet connection. For researchers, the benefits are obvious: a historian in Brazil can study a medieval manuscript held in Germany without leaving home. Digitisation also protects fragile originals, since they need to be handled less often. Yet the process raises difficult questions. Digital files are not as permanent as many people assume; storage formats become obsolete, and data can be lost if it is not regularly copied to new systems. Some archivists warn that we may be creating a 'digital dark age', in which records from our own time become unreadable to future generations. Moreover, because digitisation is expensive, institutions must choose which items to digitise first, and these choices can shape which parts of history receive the most attention.

59. According to the passage, one benefit of digitisation for researchers is that ----.

A) they can examine distant collections without travelling
B) they no longer need to study original documents at all
C) digital copies are always more accurate than originals
D) it makes medieval manuscripts easier to understand
E) it allows them to buy rare books more cheaply

60. It is stated in the passage that digitisation helps protect fragile originals because ----.

A) digital copies can be printed if the originals are lost
B) the originals are stored underground after digitisation
C) museums no longer allow visitors to see them
D) the process makes paper stronger
E) the originals are touched and moved less frequently

61. The expression 'digital dark age' refers to a situation in which ----.

A) people stop using computers to store information
B) museums are closed because of the cost of digitisation
C) historians lose interest in the Middle Ages
D) today's digital records can no longer be read in the future
E) the internet becomes unavailable in many countries

62. The author suggests in the last sentence that institutions' choices about what to digitise ----.

A) are made randomly because of limited budgets
B) are decided entirely by historians
C) may influence which aspects of the past become more visible
D) have no effect on future research
E) are less important than the choice of storage format

72. For decades, nutrition experts warned that eating eggs would raise cholesterol levels and increase the risk of heart disease. ---- Most of the cholesterol in our blood is produced by the liver, and for most people, the cholesterol found in food has only a small effect on blood levels. As a result, many health organisations have removed strict limits on egg consumption from their dietary guidelines.

A) Eggs are an excellent source of protein and several important vitamins.
B) More recent research, however, has shown that the picture is more complicated.
C) Chickens were first domesticated in Asia thousands of years ago.
D) Many people prefer to eat eggs for breakfast rather than lunch.
E) Heart disease is one of the leading causes of death worldwide.

73. In the early twentieth century, many cities around the world had extensive tram networks. ---- Trams were seen as old-fashioned and as an obstacle to car traffic, and buses offered greater flexibility. In recent decades, however, trams have made a comeback, as cities look for clean and efficient forms of public transport.

A) From the 1930s onwards, however, most of these networks were dismantled.
B) The first electric trams appeared in Germany in the 1880s.
C) Many people today prefer to cycle to work rather than take public transport.
D) Cars became much cheaper after the Second World War.
E) Some cities still use horses to pull carriages for tourists.

74. Kintsugi is a traditional Japanese technique for repairing broken pottery. Instead of hiding the cracks, craftspeople fill them with lacquer mixed with powdered gold, making the repair clearly visible. ---- In this way, the history of the object, including the moment it was damaged, becomes part of its beauty.

A) Japanese pottery is famous for its simple shapes and natural colours.
B) Gold has been used as a form of currency for thousands of years.
C) Many people today throw away broken objects instead of repairing them.
D) The philosophy behind the technique is that breakage is not something to be ashamed of.
E) Tea ceremonies became popular in Japan in the sixteenth century.

75. Ants are among the most successful animals on Earth, with an estimated twenty quadrillion individuals alive at any one time. Their success is largely due to their remarkable social organisation. ---- Some collect food, others care for the young, and still others defend the colony against intruders.

A) Ants can carry objects many times heavier than their own bodies.
B) Within a colony, individuals perform different roles according to a strict division of labour.
C) Some species of ants are considered pests because they damage crops.
D) Ants communicate mainly through chemical signals called pheromones.
E) Ants first appeared around one hundred and forty million years ago.

Before the middle of the nineteenth century, surgery was a terrifying experience. Patients were fully conscious during operations, (17) ---- surgeons had to work as quickly as possible to limit their suffering. Some patients died from shock, and many refused surgery altogether, preferring to live with their illness. This changed dramatically in 1846, (18) ---- a dentist in Boston publicly demonstrated the use of ether to make a patient unconscious during the removal of a tumour. News of the demonstration spread rapidly, and within months ether was being used in hospitals across Europe and North America. (19) ---- the following year, a Scottish doctor introduced chloroform, which was easier to use. Anaesthesia allowed surgeons to perform longer and more complex operations. (20) ----, it did not immediately make surgery safe, because doctors did not yet understand that infections were caused by germs. It was only when anaesthesia was combined with antiseptic techniques later in the century (21) ---- surgery became truly transformed.

The anthropologist Robin Dunbar has proposed that humans can maintain stable social relationships with only about one hundred and fifty people. This figure, now known as Dunbar's number, is based on a comparison of brain size and group size in primates. Dunbar found that species with larger neocortices, the part of the brain (22) ---- with complex thought, tend to live in larger groups. Applying this relationship to humans, he calculated that our natural group size should be around one hundred and fifty. Interestingly, this number appears in many different contexts, (23) ---- the size of traditional villages to military units and the average number of people to whom individuals send holiday cards. (24) ---- social media allows us to have thousands of 'friends' online, research suggests that the number of people with whom we have meaningful contact (25) ---- roughly the same. Critics argue that the figure is too precise and that group sizes vary widely between cultures, (26) ---- Dunbar's work has nevertheless been influential in fields ranging from business management to the design of online communities.

Tardigrades, also known as water bears, are microscopic animals that rarely grow longer than one millimetre. Despite their tiny size, they are among the toughest creatures on Earth. They have been found in almost every habitat imaginable, from the tops of mountains to the deep sea and the ice of Antarctica. Their most remarkable ability is a state called cryptobiosis. When their environment dries out, tardigrades curl into a ball, lose almost all the water in their bodies and reduce their metabolism to less than one hundredth of a per cent of its normal rate. In this condition, they can survive temperatures close to absolute zero, intense radiation and even the vacuum of space, as experiments on satellites have shown. When water returns, they can revive within hours. Scientists are studying the proteins that protect tardigrades' cells during this process, hoping that they could one day be used to preserve vaccines without refrigeration or to protect human cells from damage.

43. According to the passage, tardigrades are remarkable mainly because ----.

A) they can survive extremely harsh conditions despite being very small

B) they are the largest microscopic animals ever discovered

C) they live only in the ice of Antarctica

D) they grow much larger when water is available

E) they have been sent into space by scientists many times

44. It is stated in the passage that during cryptobiosis tardigrades ----.

A) increase their metabolism considerably in order to stay warm

B) lose most of their body water and slow their metabolism dramatically

C) search for new habitats with more water

D) grow a hard protective shell around their tiny bodies

E) produce large amounts of water inside their cells

45. The experiments on satellites mentioned in the passage showed that tardigrades ----.

A) can survive the vacuum of space in their dried-out state

B) cannot survive outside the Earth's atmosphere

C) reproduce more quickly in space than on Earth

D) need radiation in order to revive

E) lose their protective proteins in space

46. According to the last sentence, scientists hope that tardigrade proteins could ----.

A) be used to make it possible for humans to live in space
B) help to keep vaccines stable without the need for cold storage
C) replace all of the vaccines that are currently in use
D) make tardigrades grow much larger than one millimetre
E) be used as a source of food

When it opened in 1869, the Suez Canal transformed global trade. By connecting the Mediterranean Sea with the Red Sea, it allowed ships travelling between Europe and Asia to avoid the long and dangerous voyage around the southern tip of Africa, shortening the journey by thousands of kilometres. The idea of linking the two seas was ancient; earlier canals had connected the Nile to the Red Sea at various times in history. The modern canal, however, was the result of a project led by the French diplomat Ferdinand de Lesseps and built over ten years by tens of thousands of workers, many of whom were forced labourers who worked in harsh conditions. The canal soon became one of the most strategically important waterways in the world, and control over it was the subject of international tension for much of the twentieth century. Today, around twelve per cent of global trade passes through it. Its importance was demonstrated in 2021, when a giant container ship became stuck across the canal for six days, holding up hundreds of vessels and disrupting supply chains worldwide.

47. According to the passage, the Suez Canal was important for trade because ----.

A) it was the first canal ever built in Egypt
B) it connected the Nile directly to the Mediterranean
C) it allowed ships to sail around the southern tip of Africa
D) it greatly reduced the distance between Europe and Asia by sea
E) it was built by the French government alone

48. It can be understood from the passage that the idea of a canal between the two seas ----.

A) had existed long before the modern canal was built
B) was first suggested by Ferdinand de Lesseps
C) was rejected by Egyptian rulers for centuries
D) became possible only after 1869
E) was opposed by the workers who built it

49. The passage states that many of the workers who built the canal ----.

A) were highly paid engineers brought over from France
B) refused to work in the hot climate
C) later became wealthy traders in the ports along the canal
D) worked on the project for only a few months
E) were made to work against their will in difficult conditions

50. The author mentions the events of 2021 in order to ----.

A) criticise the design of modern container ships
B) show that the canal is no longer important
C) explain why the canal was built in the nineteenth century
D) illustrate how much the world economy still depends on the canal
E) argue that the canal should be widened immediately

Carbon capture and storage, often referred to as CCS, is a technology designed to prevent carbon dioxide from reaching the atmosphere. In a typical system, the gas is separated from the emissions of power stations or factories, compressed and transported through pipelines to be stored deep underground, usually in old oil and gas fields or porous rock formations. Supporters argue that CCS is essential for reducing emissions from industries such as cement and steel production, which release carbon dioxide as part of their chemical processes and cannot easily switch to renewable energy. Some go further, suggesting that the technology could be combined with plants grown for fuel to actually remove carbon dioxide from the air. Critics, however, point out that CCS has so far been slow to develop and expensive to operate, and that only a tiny fraction of global emissions is currently captured. They also worry that promises of future carbon capture could be used by polluting industries as an excuse to delay the more difficult task of cutting emissions directly.

51. According to the passage, in carbon capture and storage, carbon dioxide is ----.

A) converted into renewable energy in power stations
B) released slowly into the atmosphere over many years
C) used to produce cement and steel
D) absorbed by plants grown near factories
E) separated from emissions and stored underground

52. Supporters believe that CCS is particularly important for the cement and steel industries because ----.

A) they already use renewable energy for most stages of their production processes
B) their production processes release carbon dioxide that renewable energy cannot eliminate
C) they are located near old oil and gas fields
D) they produce less carbon dioxide than other industries
E) their factories are generally too small and old to be modernised at a reasonable cost

53. Which of the following is NOT one of the criticisms of CCS mentioned in the passage?

A) It has developed slowly.
B) It is costly to run.
C) Stored carbon dioxide often leaks back into the air.
D) It currently captures only a very small share of emissions.
E) It may be used as an excuse to delay cutting emissions.

54. It can be inferred from the passage that the author ----.

A) presents both the potential benefits and the limitations of CCS
B) believes that CCS will solve climate change on its own
C) thinks that CCS should be banned immediately
D) works for a company that develops CCS technology
E) has no interest in the issue of carbon emissions

For many years, it was widely assumed that the key to a long life lay mainly in our genes. Studies of twins, however, have suggested that genetics accounts for only about a quarter of the variation in how long people live; the rest is determined by lifestyle and environment. Researchers have therefore turned their attention to communities where unusually large numbers of people live past one hundred. These regions, sometimes called 'blue zones', include parts of Japan, Italy, Greece and Costa Rica. Although they are geographically and culturally very different, they share several characteristics. Their inhabitants tend to eat diets based largely on plants, to be physically active as part of their daily routines rather than through formal exercise, and to maintain strong ties with family and community. Many also report having a clear sense of purpose. Some scientists caution that the data on age in certain regions may be unreliable, since birth records were not always accurate. Nevertheless, the lifestyle patterns observed are consistent with evidence from other studies of healthy ageing.

55. According to the twin studies mentioned in the passage, ----.

A) genes are the most important factor in determining how long people live
B) twins usually live longer than other people
C) lifestyle has no effect on how long people live
D) people with long-lived parents always live to be one hundred
E) genes explain only a minor part of the differences in lifespan

56. Which of the following is NOT mentioned as a characteristic shared by blue zones?

A) A diet consisting mainly of plants
B) Physical activity built into daily life
C) Close relationships with family and community
D) Regular visits to gyms and fitness centres
E) A strong sense of purpose

57. Some scientists are cautious about blue zones because ----.

A) the regions are too different from one another
B) most inhabitants do not eat healthy diets
C) the regions have very small populations
D) genetic factors have not been studied there
E) the recorded ages of some people may not be accurate

58. It can be concluded from the last sentence that ----.

A) the data from blue zones should be ignored completely
B) the lifestyle habits seen in blue zones are supported by other research
C) other studies have found that diet has no effect on ageing
D) scientists have proved that blue zones do not exist
E) people should move to blue zones in order to live longer

The way we describe directions might seem universal, but languages differ in surprising ways. Speakers of English and Turkish usually describe the position of objects relative to their own bodies, using words such as 'left' and 'right'. In some languages, however, speakers rely instead on fixed geographical directions such as north, south, east and west, even for small objects nearby. A speaker of one Aboriginal language in Australia, for example, might say that there is an ant on your 'south-west leg'. To use such a system, speakers must remain constantly aware of their orientation, and research has shown that they are remarkably good at it, even in unfamiliar buildings. Some researchers argue that this demonstrates how the language we speak can shape the way we think about space. Others are more cautious, suggesting that the environment and culture of a community may influence both its language and its spatial thinking, rather than language influencing thought directly. The debate forms part of a wider discussion about the relationship between language and cognition.

59. According to the passage, speakers of some languages ----.

A) do not have any words for describing directions
B) describe the location of objects using compass directions rather than left and right
D) find it difficult to know where north is E) describe only large objects in terms of directions

60. The example of the ant on the 'south-west leg' is given to ----.

A) illustrate how such a system is used in everyday situations
B) show that some languages have no word for 'leg'
C) prove that Aboriginal languages are difficult to learn
D) explain why ants are common in Australia
E) compare English and Turkish directions

61. It is stated in the passage that speakers who use fixed directions ----.

A) often get lost in unfamiliar buildings
B) are very good at keeping track of their orientation
C) cannot learn languages that use left and right
D) use maps more frequently than other people
E) need special training to use their language

62. The researchers who are 'more cautious' believe that ----.

A) language has no connection with the way people think
B) all languages describe directions in the same way
C) spatial thinking is determined entirely by language
D) culture and environment may affect both language and spatial thinking
E) the research on Aboriginal languages was carried out incorrectly

63. Gizem: I've been invited to give a talk at a conference, but I'm terrified of public speaking.
Tuna: ----
Gizem: That's true, I do. Maybe I'm just nervous because the audience will be much bigger.
Tuna: Exactly. Prepare well, practise in front of a few friends, and you'll be fine.

A) Why don't you just refuse the invitation then?
B) How many people are going to attend the conference?
C) I'd be terrified too. I hate speaking in public.
D) When is the conference taking place?
E) But you give presentations to your team at work all the time, don't you?

64. Passenger: Excuse me, is this the right platform for the train to Izmir?
Staff: ----
Passenger: Oh no! How long will I have to wait for the next one?
Staff: Only about twenty minutes. It leaves from platform three.

A) Yes, and it's due to arrive in two minutes.
B) The ticket office is at the end of the hall.
C) You can buy a ticket from the machine over there.
D) Trains to Izmir are usually very crowded.
E) It is, but I'm afraid the train has just left.

65. Mother: You've been on your computer all afternoon. Have you done your homework?
Son: ----
Mother: Really? Then why do you still have your history book open on the desk?
Son: Well, I've done most of it. I just have one more question to answer.

A) No, I haven't started it yet.
B) I don't have any homework this week.
C) Yes, I finished it hours ago.
D) Can you help me with my maths homework?
E) I'll do it after dinner, I promise.

72. The word 'robot' was first used in a play written by the Czech author Karel Čapek in 1920. ---- In the play, robots are artificial workers who eventually rebel against their human creators. Since then, the idea of machines turning against humanity has become a recurring theme in science fiction.

A) Today, robots are widely used in factories around the world.
B) Many people fear that robots will take their jobs in the future.
C) The first industrial robot was installed in 1961.
D) It comes from a Czech word meaning 'forced labour'.
E) Čapek also wrote novels and travel books.

73. Many people believe that goldfish have a memory span of only three seconds. ---- In one experiment, goldfish were trained to push a lever to receive food, and they continued to do so for weeks. Other studies have shown that they can learn to associate particular sounds or colours with feeding time.

A) However, experiments have shown that they can actually remember things for months.
B) Goldfish are among the most popular pets in the world.
C) They were first bred in China more than a thousand years ago.
D) Goldfish can grow much larger in ponds than in small bowls.
E) Some fish species can live for more than fifty years.

74. In the past, maps were often deliberately inaccurate. Mapmakers sometimes included 'trap streets', fictional roads that did not exist in reality. ---- If a competitor's map contained the same imaginary street, it was clear evidence that the map had been copied.

A) Most maps at that time were drawn by hand on paper.
B) Many travellers became lost because of these mistakes.
C) Today, satellite images make maps much more accurate.
D) Some cities have changed the names of their streets several times.
E) These were intended to help them detect when others had copied their work.

75. Spending time outdoors in childhood may help to protect against short-sightedness. In recent decades, the proportion of children who need glasses has risen sharply in many countries, especially in East Asia. ---- As a result, some schools have started to give children more time outside during the school day.

A) Glasses are thought to have been invented in Italy in the thirteenth century, probably by craftsmen working with glass.
B) Many adults also need glasses when they reach middle age.
C) Researchers believe this is partly because children spend more time indoors studying and using screens, and less time in natural light.
D) Contact lenses have become far more popular than glasses among teenagers and young adults in recent years.
E) Eye tests are now free for children in many countries.

In films and news reports, crowds facing an emergency are often shown panicking, with people pushing each other aside in a desperate attempt to escape. Research on real disasters, (22) ----, paints a very different picture. Studies of events such as building fires and terrorist attacks have found that genuine panic is rare. (23) ---- behaving selfishly, people in crowds typically help one another, often at considerable risk to themselves. Psychologists explain this by arguing that a shared danger creates a sense of common identity among strangers, (24) ---- encourages cooperation. These findings have practical consequences. (25) ---- authorities assume that the public will panic, they may withhold information or fail to communicate clearly, which can actually make a situation more dangerous. Experts now recommend that emergency planners treat the public as a resource (26) ---- than a problem, giving people clear information and trusting them to act sensibly.

Predicting earthquakes has long been one of the great goals of geology, yet despite decades of research, scientists still cannot say exactly when and where a major earthquake will strike. Many possible warning signs have been studied, including changes in groundwater levels, unusual animal behaviour and small tremors before a large quake, but none has proved reliable enough to issue specific warnings. What scientists can do is estimate probabilities. By studying the history of a fault and measuring how much strain is building up in the rocks, they can calculate the likelihood of a large earthquake occurring in a particular region over a period of decades. Such forecasts are useful for planning, as they help governments decide where to enforce stricter building codes. In addition, some countries have developed early warning systems that detect the first, faster waves of an earthquake and send alerts before the more destructive waves arrive. These systems provide only seconds of warning, but that can be enough to stop trains, shut down gas lines and allow people to take cover.

43. According to the passage, the warning signs that have been studied ----.

A) allow scientists to predict earthquakes several days in advance
B) are used by governments to decide when to evacuate cities
C) include changes in the weather before an earthquake
D) have not been reliable enough to predict specific earthquakes
E) have been ignored by most scientists

44. It is stated in the passage that scientists can ----.

A) predict the exact day on which an earthquake will occur
B) prevent strain from building up in the rocks along a fault
C) stop the waves of an earthquake from reaching large cities
D) measure earthquakes only after they have finished
E) calculate the chances of a large earthquake in a region over several decades

45. Long-term earthquake forecasts are useful because ----.

A) they give people several weeks to leave their homes
B) they are more accurate than early warning systems
C) they allow scientists to stop earthquakes
D) they help authorities decide where buildings must be made stronger
E) they show which animals behave strangely before earthquakes

46. According to the passage, early warning systems ----.

A) can predict earthquakes days before they happen
B) detect the slower and more destructive waves first
C) give only a few seconds' notice but can still reduce damage
D) are used only in countries with no earthquakes
E) have replaced the need for stricter building codes

Since the early twentieth century, average scores on intelligence tests have risen steadily in many countries, by around three points per decade. This phenomenon is known as the Flynn effect, after the researcher who documented it most thoroughly. The rise is so large that an average person today would score well above average if compared with the population of a century ago. Few researchers believe that people have become genuinely more intelligent in such a short time; genetic changes could not occur so quickly. Instead, several environmental explanations have been proposed. Improved nutrition and healthcare may have helped children's brains develop more fully. Longer and better schooling has made people more familiar with the kind of abstract reasoning that tests measure. Some researchers also suggest that modern life, with its technology and complex information, constantly trains people to think in abstract categories. Interestingly, in some developed countries, the Flynn effect appears to have slowed or even reversed in recent decades, a trend that researchers are still trying to explain.

47. According to the passage, the Flynn effect refers to ----.

A) the decline in intelligence caused by modern technology
B) the steady increase in average intelligence test scores over many decades
C) a genetic change that has made people more intelligent
D) the difference in intelligence between countries
E) a new type of intelligence test

48. Most researchers reject the idea that people have become genuinely more intelligent because ----.

A) genetic changes could not happen in such a short period
B) intelligence tests have become much easier
C) average scores have actually fallen in most countries
D) nutrition has become worse over the past century
E) people today spend less time at school

49. Which of the following is NOT mentioned as a possible explanation for the Flynn effect?

A) Better nutrition
B) Improvements in healthcare
C) Longer and better education
D) Increased physical exercise among children
E) The demands of modern technology and information

50. It can be understood from the last sentence that ----.

A) the Flynn effect has been fully explained by researchers
B) the rise in test scores has stopped or reversed in some countries
C) intelligence test scores are rising faster than ever
D) developed countries no longer use intelligence tests
E) the Flynn effect has never been observed in developed countries

Since the late 1990s, a series of robotic rovers have explored the surface of Mars, transforming our understanding of the planet. Early missions confirmed what orbiting spacecraft had suggested: that liquid water once flowed across the Martian surface. Rovers found rocks that could only have formed in water and minerals such as clay, which develop over long periods in wet conditions. Later rovers were equipped with laboratories capable of analysing soil and rock samples on the spot. One of them detected organic molecules, the chemical building blocks of life, although scientists stress that such molecules can also be produced without living organisms. The most recent rover is collecting samples that are intended to be brought back to Earth by a future mission, allowing them to be studied with instruments far more sophisticated than any that can be sent to Mars. Such analysis could finally answer the question of whether microscopic life ever existed on the planet. For now, the rovers have shown that ancient Mars had conditions that would have been suitable for life.

51. According to the passage, early rover missions confirmed that ----.

A) life currently exists on Mars
B) Mars has always been completely dry
C) water once flowed on the surface of Mars
D) orbiting spacecraft had made serious errors
E) clay cannot form on other planets

52. Scientists are cautious about the organic molecules detected by one rover because ----.

A) these molecules can also be formed by non-living processes
B) the rover's laboratory was not working properly
C) they were found in rocks that had formed in water
D) they were brought to Mars from the Earth
E) they cannot be analysed on the spot

53. The samples collected by the most recent rover are important because ----.

A) they prove that microscopic life still exists on Mars today
B) they contain large amounts of liquid water
C) they will be used to build a permanent research base on Mars
D) they can be studied on Earth with much more advanced instruments
E) they were analysed immediately by the rover's own laboratory

54. It can be concluded from the passage that ----.

A) scientists have now proved beyond doubt that Mars has never supported any form of life
B) living organisms were found by the most recent rover
C) the rovers have so far failed to find anything of real scientific value on the planet
D) future missions to Mars have been cancelled
E) Mars once had conditions that could have supported life, though life has not been proved

In many countries, the number of people who live alone has risen dramatically over the past half century. In some northern European cities, single-person households now make up more than half of all homes. This trend was once viewed with concern, as living alone was associated with isolation and loneliness. Sociologists, however, have offered a more nuanced interpretation. They point out that the rise is closely linked to positive developments: greater economic independence, particularly among women, longer life expectancy and welfare systems that allow older people to remain in their own homes. For many young professionals, living alone is a deliberate choice that offers privacy and freedom. Research also suggests that people who live alone are not necessarily more isolated; many maintain active social lives and spend more time with friends than those who live with partners. Nevertheless, the trend poses challenges for urban planning, since cities designed for families may lack the smaller, affordable homes that single people need.

55. According to the passage, the increase in people living alone was originally ----.

A) seen as a sign of loneliness and isolation
B) welcomed by most sociologists
C) limited to northern European cities
D) caused by a shortage of family homes
E) found mainly among older women

56. Sociologists link the rise in single-person households to ----.

A) a decline in the number of marriages in Europe
B) positive social changes such as financial independence and longer lives
C) rapidly rising house prices in most of Europe's large cities
D) the growing unwillingness of young people to work full-time
E) the closure of care homes for older people

57. It is stated in the passage that people who live alone ----.

A) usually spend less time with friends than others
B) find it difficult to make friends in large cities
C) would prefer to live with their families
D) often have active social lives and are not always more isolated
E) are mostly people who have lost their partners

58. According to the last sentence, the trend creates problems for cities because ----.

A) single people refuse to live in city centres
B) there may not be enough small and affordable homes
C) families are moving out of cities
D) planners have stopped building new homes
E) single people use more public transport

59 – 62. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

Among the most important and least appreciated inventions of the twentieth century is the shipping container. Before its introduction in the 1950s, cargo was loaded onto ships piece by piece by large teams of dock workers. Sacks, barrels and boxes of different sizes had to be handled individually, a process that could take days and made shipping slow and expensive. Theft and damage were also common. The standardised steel container changed all this. Because containers come in a few fixed sizes, they can be moved directly from ships to trains and lorries using cranes, without the goods inside ever being unpacked. Loading times fell from days to hours, and the cost of shipping dropped dramatically. Economists argue that this reduction in transport costs was a major driving force behind globalisation, making it profitable to manufacture goods in one country and sell them on the other side of the world. The change also had social consequences: traditional port communities declined as fewer dock workers were needed, and new ports were built far from old city centres.

59. According to the passage, before containers were introduced, shipping was ----.

A) much cheaper and faster than it is today
B) slow and costly because goods were loaded individually
C) carried out mainly by trains and lorries instead of ships
D) rarely affected by theft or damage
E) controlled by a small number of workers

60. The standard sizes of containers are important because ----.

A) they allow goods to be transferred between different types of transport easily
B) they make it possible to employ many more dock workers in each port
C) they prevent goods from being sold in other countries
D) they make containers much cheaper to manufacture than sacks and barrels
E) they allow cargo to be unpacked more quickly at ports

61. According to economists, the shipping container contributed to globalisation by ----.

A) increasing the number of dock workers in ports
B) greatly reducing the cost of transporting goods
C) making it unnecessary to manufacture goods abroad
D) encouraging countries to build ports in city centres
E) making theft at ports more common

62. It is stated in the passage that one social consequence of containers was that ----.

A) traditional port communities declined because fewer workers were needed
B) more people moved to live near old city centres
C) dock workers' wages rose dramatically in most of the old ports
D) new ports were built in the centres of old cities
E) imported goods became much more expensive for ordinary people

Deep beneath the surface of Antarctica lie layers of ice that have built up over hundreds of thousands of years. As snow falls and is compressed into ice, it traps tiny bubbles of air. (17) ---- scientists drill out long cylinders of this ice, known as ice cores, they can analyse the air inside these bubbles to learn about the composition of the atmosphere in the distant past. The oldest continuous ice core recovered so far covers about eight hundred thousand years. It shows that levels of carbon dioxide have risen and fallen in step with temperature over that period, (18) ---- never exceeding a certain level until the industrial era. Today's concentrations are far higher than any recorded in the ice. Ice cores also contain traces of volcanic ash and dust, (19) ---- allows researchers to identify major eruptions and periods of drought. In several countries, cash is rapidly disappearing from everyday life. In Sweden, for example, fewer than one in ten purchases is now paid for with notes and coins, and many shops no longer accept cash at all. Supporters of this trend argue that digital payments are faster, safer and more convenient. They also make it harder for criminals to hide money, (22) ---- every transaction leaves an electronic record. Critics, however, warn that a cashless society carries significant risks. Older people and those (23) ---- limited access to the internet or bank accounts may find themselves excluded from basic services. There are also concerns about privacy, as digital payments allow banks and governments to track people's spending in detail. (24) ----, a society that depends entirely on electronic systems could be paralysed by a power cut or cyberattack. For these reasons, some governments that once encouraged the move away from cash have begun to require banks to continue (25) ---- cash services. Humans are the only animals that cook their food, and some researchers believe that this habit has played a central role in our evolution. According to one influential theory, our ancestors began to control fire and cook food at least a million years ago. Cooking makes food softer and easier to digest, allowing the body to extract far more energy from the same amount of food. Supporters of the theory argue that this extra energy made it possible for the human brain, which consumes around a fifth of the body's energy, to grow larger. They also point out that cooking may explain why humans have smaller teeth, jaws and digestive systems than other primates; we simply do not need them to process raw food. Critics accept that cooking was important but question the timing. Clear evidence of the regular use of fire, such as hearths, appears in the archaeological record much later than one million years ago, although traces of fire that early have been found at a few sites.

43. According to the theory described in the passage, cooking ----.

A) was first practised by humans only a few thousand years ago
B) made food much harder for early humans to digest
C) may have provided the extra energy needed for the brain to grow
D) caused humans to develop larger teeth and jaws
E) was used mainly to protect food from animals

44. It is stated in the passage that the human brain ----.

A) is smaller than the brains of other primates
B) uses about twenty per cent of the body's energy
C) requires raw food in order to develop properly
D) stopped growing when humans began to cook
E) uses very little energy compared with other organs

45. Supporters of the theory use the size of human teeth and digestive systems as evidence that ----.

A) early humans ate mainly raw meat and plants
B) humans are closely related to all other primates
C) cooking was invented only very recently
D) fire was used mainly for warmth rather than cooking
E) humans adapted to eating food that had been softened by cooking

46. The critics mentioned in the passage mainly question ----.

A) whether cooking was important for human evolution at all
B) whether early humans had larger brains than other primates
C) when humans began to use fire and cook regularly
D) why cooking makes food easier to digest
E) how much energy the human brain consumes

Most people assume that having more choices makes them happier. In a well-known experiment, however, researchers set up a tasting stand in a supermarket that offered either six or twenty-four varieties of jam. The larger display attracted more visitors, but shoppers who saw only six varieties were around ten times more likely to buy a jar. The researchers concluded that too many options can overwhelm people, a phenomenon now known as 'choice overload'. When faced with a large number of alternatives, people may delay their decision, choose nothing at all or feel less satisfied with the option they eventually select, since they wonder whether one of the others might have been better. Later studies have shown that the effect is not universal. It is strongest when people are unfamiliar with the products, when options are difficult to compare and when the decision feels important. Experts in a particular field, by contrast, often welcome a wide range of choices because they know exactly what they are looking for.

47. The jam experiment showed that ----.

A) shoppers preferred the stand with twenty-four varieties and bought more jam there
B) most shoppers did not like any of the varieties of jam on offer
C) the number of options had no effect on whether people bought jam
D) fewer options led to more purchases even though the larger display attracted more people
E) people bought more jam when the stand was placed near the entrance

48. According to the passage, people faced with too many choices may ----.

A) always choose the most expensive option
B) be less happy with their final decision
C) make their decision more quickly
D) feel more confident about what they buy
E) prefer to shop in larger supermarkets

49. It can be understood from the passage that choice overload is most likely to occur when ----.

A) people are experts who know exactly what they want
B) the decision is unimportant and the products are familiar
C) people do not know much about the products and find them hard to compare
D) only a small number of options are available
E) shoppers have plenty of time to make their decision

50. The author mentions experts in the last sentence in order to ----.

A) argue that experts should help shoppers make decisions
B) prove that the jam experiment was carried out incorrectly
C) explain why supermarkets offer so many products
D) show that a large number of choices is not a problem for everyone
E) suggest that experts are rarely satisfied with their choices

The Library of Alexandria, founded in Egypt in the third century BC, is often remembered as the greatest library of the ancient world. It is said to have contained hundreds of thousands of scrolls and attracted scholars from across the Mediterranean, who made important advances in mathematics, astronomy and medicine. Its destruction is frequently presented as a single catastrophic event, usually a fire, in which much of ancient knowledge was lost in a day. Historians now believe that the reality was more gradual. The library suffered damage on several occasions, including a fire during a war in 48 BC, but it seems to have continued operating for centuries afterwards. Its decline was probably caused mainly by a lack of funding and political support, as successive rulers showed less interest in scholarship and scholars moved elsewhere. Moreover, many of its texts had been copied and existed in other libraries. The popular story of a single dramatic fire, historians argue, says more about our desire for simple explanations than about what actually happened.

51. According to the passage, the destruction of the Library of Alexandria is often described as ----.

A) a slow process that took several centuries to complete
B) the result of scholars moving to other cities
C) a decision made by rulers who disliked scholarship
D) a sudden event in which a great deal of knowledge was lost at once
E) an accident caused by scholars working with fire

52. Historians now believe that the library ----.

A) was destroyed completely in a fire in 48 BC
B) never contained as many scrolls as was claimed
C) was closed because its scholars were unpopular
D) was rebuilt in another city after the war
E) continued to function for a long time after it was first damaged

53. According to the passage, the main cause of the library's decline was probably ----.

A) a single fire during a war
B) an earthquake that damaged the building
C) the theft of its most valuable scrolls
D) a gradual loss of money and political interest
E) competition from libraries in Rome

54. The author suggests in the last sentence that the popular story of the fire ----.

A) has been confirmed by recent archaeological evidence
B) reflects people's preference for simple explanations
C) was invented by scholars working in the library
D) is the most accurate account of what happened
E) explains why ancient texts were copied

55 – 58. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

Coral reefs are not the only underwater ecosystems under threat. Seagrass meadows, which grow in shallow coastal waters around the world, are disappearing at a rate of around seven per cent a year, according to some estimates. This loss receives far less attention than the decline of coral reefs, perhaps because seagrass looks less spectacular, yet its ecological value is enormous. Seagrass meadows provide nurseries for many species of fish, including some that are important for commercial fishing. Their roots stabilise sediments on the seabed, protecting coastlines from erosion, and their leaves slow down waves. Perhaps most surprisingly, seagrass is extremely effective at storing carbon. Although meadows cover only a tiny fraction of the ocean floor, they are estimated to account for around ten per cent of the carbon buried in ocean sediments each year. The main threats include pollution from farms, which reduces the clarity of the water, coastal construction and damage from boat anchors. Encouragingly, restoration projects in several countries have shown that seagrass can recover quickly when conditions improve.

55. According to the passage, the loss of seagrass receives less attention than that of coral reefs, possibly because ----.

A) seagrass is less visually impressive than coral
B) seagrass is disappearing more slowly than coral
C) seagrass has little ecological importance
D) seagrass grows only in a few countries
E) seagrass cannot be restored once it is lost

56. Which of the following is NOT mentioned as a benefit of seagrass meadows?

A) They offer a safe place for young fish to grow.
B) They help to prevent coastal erosion.
C) They reduce the force of waves.
D) They store large amounts of carbon.
E) They provide a source of food for coastal communities.

57. The author describes seagrass's ability to store carbon as surprising because ----.

A) seagrass grows only in shallow water
B) most plants in the ocean release carbon
C) seagrass meadows are disappearing quickly
D) meadows cover a very small area but store a large share of buried carbon
E) carbon is harmful to marine life

58. It can be understood from the last sentence that ----.

A) seagrass cannot survive in polluted water at all
B) restoration projects have failed in most countries
C) boat anchors are no longer a threat to seagrass
D) seagrass recovers only after several centuries
E) efforts to restore seagrass can be successful in suitable conditions

Volunteer computing is a method of carrying out large scientific calculations by using the spare processing power of ordinary people's computers. Participants download a small program that runs in the background or when their computer is idle, analysing pieces of data and sending the results back to a central server. One of the earliest and best-known projects searched radio signals from space for signs of intelligent life; millions of people around the world took part. Since then, volunteer computing has been used to model the shape of proteins, simulate climate change and search for new prime numbers. The combined power of these networks can rival that of the world's largest supercomputers, at a fraction of the cost. However, the approach is not suitable for every problem. It works best when a task can be divided into many small, independent pieces that do not need to communicate with one another. Researchers must also take care to check results, since a small number of participants may return incorrect data, whether by accident or deliberately.

59. According to the passage, volunteer computing uses ----.

A) supercomputers that are owned by large universities
B) the unused processing capacity of private individuals' computers
C) computers that have been donated to scientific institutions
D) radio signals from space to carry out calculations
E) special computers designed only for scientific work

60. The project that searched radio signals from space is mentioned as ----.

A) the only project that has used volunteer computing successfully
B) proof that intelligent life exists elsewhere in the universe
C) an example of a project that failed to attract participants
D) a project carried out by a single supercomputer
E) one of the first and most famous examples of volunteer computing

61. According to the passage, volunteer computing is most suitable for tasks that ----.

A) require constant communication between different computers
B) must be completed in a single step by one powerful machine
C) involve only a small amount of data
D) can be carried out without any central server
E) can be split into many separate parts that do not depend on each other

62. Researchers need to check the results of volunteer computing because ----.

A) some participants may send back data that is wrong
B) most volunteers' computers are too slow
C) the central server often loses data
D) volunteers are not allowed to see the results
E) the programs damage participants' computers

72. The bicycle helmet is one of the simplest and most effective pieces of safety equipment ever designed. ---- Despite this evidence, however, many cyclists still choose not to wear one, often because they find helmets uncomfortable or believe that short journeys are not dangerous.

A) The first bicycles were made of wood and had no pedals at all.
B) Many cities have built separate lanes for cyclists in recent years.
C) Studies have shown that wearing a helmet can reduce the risk of serious head injury by more than half.
D) Cycling is a cheap and healthy way of getting around the city.
E) Helmets are now available in a wide range of colours and styles.

73. For centuries, the town's economy depended almost entirely on coal mining. When the last mine closed in the 1990s, unemployment rose sharply and many young people left in search of work. ---- Old mining buildings have been turned into museums and art centres, and the surrounding hills now attract walkers and cyclists from across the country.

A) Coal was one of the main sources of energy during the industrial revolution.
B) In recent years, however, the town has begun to reinvent itself as a destination for tourists.
C) Mining has always been one of the most dangerous occupations in the world.
D) Many former miners suffered from lung diseases later in life.
E) The closure of the mine was opposed by the local trade unions.

74. Octopuses, squid and cuttlefish can change the colour of their skin in a fraction of a second. ---- Each of these cells contains a sac of pigment surrounded by muscles; when the muscles contract, the sac is stretched and the colour becomes visible. This ability allows the animals to hide from predators, attract mates and even communicate with one another.

A) These animals are found in oceans all over the world.
B) Some species of squid can grow to more than ten metres in length.
C) Cuttlefish are often confused with fish, although they are molluscs.
D) Many people enjoy eating squid, especially when it is fried.
E) They do this using thousands of special cells in their skin called chromatophores.

75. When people imagine scientific discoveries, they often picture a lone genius having a sudden moment of inspiration. ---- Most important discoveries are the result of years of work by large teams, building on the findings of many earlier researchers. Even famous breakthroughs usually depended on the efforts of colleagues whose names are rarely remembered.

A) In reality, however, science rarely works this way.
B) Isaac Newton is said to have been inspired by a falling apple.
C) Many scientists work in universities or government laboratories.
D) Scientific journals publish thousands of articles every year.
E) Some discoveries have been made completely by accident.

Over the past few decades, red foxes have moved into many of the world's cities, from London to Melbourne. They have proved remarkably well suited to urban life, feeding on food waste, small animals and fruit, and making their dens in gardens, parks and under buildings. Studies suggest that urban foxes have already begun to change (17) ---- their rural relatives. City foxes tend to be bolder and less afraid of humans, and some researchers have found differences in the shape of their skulls, (18) ---- may reflect a diet that requires less biting force. Foxes are not the only animals (19) ---- have adapted to cities. Birds such as crows and pigeons, as well as coyotes in North America, have also learned to exploit urban environments. In 1968, the ecologist Garrett Hardin published an influential essay called 'The Tragedy of the Commons'. He argued that when a resource such as a pasture or a fishing ground is shared by everyone, each individual has an incentive to use as much of it as possible, (22) ---- overuse eventually destroys it for all. Hardin concluded that shared resources could only be protected by government control or by dividing them into private property. His argument was widely accepted for decades. The political scientist Elinor Ostrom, (23) ----, challenged this view. By studying communities around the world, from Swiss mountain villages to fishing villages in Turkey, she showed that many groups had successfully managed shared resources for centuries (24) ---- relying on either the state or private ownership. These communities developed their own rules, monitored one another and imposed penalties on those (25) ---- broke the rules. Ostrom's research, for which she became the first woman to receive the Nobel Prize in Economics, demonstrated that local cooperation can be just as effective as, and sometimes more effective (26) ----, solutions imposed from above.

Most mammals sleep with their whole brain, but dolphins and some other marine mammals have evolved a remarkable alternative. They can sleep with one half of the brain at a time, a state known as unihemispheric sleep. While one hemisphere rests, the other remains alert, allowing the animal to continue swimming, surface to breathe and watch for predators. The eye connected to the awake hemisphere usually stays open. This adaptation is thought to be essential for dolphins because, unlike humans, they breathe voluntarily: if they fell completely asleep, they might stop breathing and drown. Some birds use a similar strategy. Ducks sleeping at the edge of a group have been observed keeping the eye facing away from the group open, presumably to detect approaching danger. Certain seabirds even appear to sleep in short bursts with one hemisphere while flying over the ocean for weeks. Researchers hope that understanding how one half of the brain can rest while the other works will shed light on the fundamental purpose of sleep itself.

43. According to the passage, unihemispheric sleep allows dolphins to ----.

A) sleep for much longer periods than other marine mammals

B) keep swimming, breathing and watching for danger while resting

C) stop breathing for several hours without suffering any harm

D) rest both halves of the brain at exactly the same time

E) close both eyes completely while they are swimming

44. This type of sleep is believed to be essential for dolphins because ----.

A) they have very small brains compared with humans

B) they live mainly in very cold water

C) they need to sleep for many hours each day

D) they are attacked by predators only at night

E) they have to decide consciously when to breathe

45. The example of the ducks shows that ----.

A) ducks sleep with both of their eyes open almost all the time

B) only the birds in the middle of a group are able to fall asleep

C) ducks are more intelligent than other birds

D) birds sleep less than mammals do

E) some birds use one-sided sleep to stay alert to possible threats

46. According to the last sentence, researchers hope that studying unihemispheric sleep will ----.

A) help them understand why sleep is necessary at all
B) allow humans to sleep with only one half of the brain
C) prove that dolphins do not need to sleep
D) explain how seabirds fly over the ocean
E) show which animals are most intelligent

Many people have experienced a sudden shiver or a tingling sensation down the spine when listening to a particularly moving piece of music. Scientists call these sensations 'musical chills' and have studied them to understand why music affects us so deeply. Brain-imaging studies have shown that chills are associated with activity in the brain's reward system, the same network that responds to food and other pleasures, and with the release of dopamine. Interestingly, dopamine appears to be released not only at the peak of emotional intensity but also in the moments before it, as listeners anticipate what is about to happen. Chills are often triggered by unexpected changes, such as a sudden shift in volume, the entry of a new instrument or an unusual harmony. Not everyone experiences them, however. Research suggests that people who score highly on a personality trait called openness to experience are more likely to feel chills, and that personal memories associated with a song can also play a significant role.

47. According to the passage, musical chills are linked to ----.

A) a sharp decrease in the release of dopamine in the brain
B) activity in the part of the brain that responds to rewards
C) the parts of the brain that control movement
D) a general lack of interest in other everyday pleasures
E) a fear of loud and unexpected sounds

48. It is stated in the passage that dopamine is released ----.

A) only after the piece of music has completely finished
B) both before and at the most emotional moment of the music
C) only when the listener is eating or drinking something
D) mainly when the listener feels bored or distracted
E) only during the first few seconds of a piece of music

49. Which of the following is mentioned as a possible trigger of musical chills?

A) A sudden change in how loud the music is
B) Listening to music that one already knows very well
C) Music that remains the same from beginning to end
D) Listening to music in a quiet room
E) Very slow music with no instruments

50. According to the passage, people are more likely to experience chills if ----.

A) they have studied music at a professional level for many years
B) they listen to music only rarely and usually in the background
C) they generally prefer quiet, slow and predictable music
D) they are open to new experiences or have memories connected with the music
E) they are not particularly interested in their personal memories

The barcode, a pattern of black and white lines found on almost every product we buy, has a surprisingly long history. The idea was patented in the United States in 1952 by two inventors who had been inspired by Morse code; one of them later said he had come up with the concept while drawing lines in the sand on a beach. However, the technology needed to read barcodes reliably did not exist at the time, and the invention remained unused for more than two decades. It was only in 1974, after the development of affordable lasers and computers, that a packet of chewing gum became the first product to be scanned at a supermarket checkout. Barcodes transformed retail. They made checkouts faster, reduced errors and, perhaps most importantly, allowed shops to track exactly what was being sold. This information enabled retailers to manage stock far more efficiently and to analyse customers' buying habits. Today, newer formats such as two-dimensional codes can store much more information and be read by ordinary smartphones.

51. According to the passage, the barcode was not used for many years after it was patented because ----.

A) the equipment needed to read it had not yet been developed
B) supermarkets did not want to use new technology
C) its inventors refused to sell the idea
D) it was too similar to Morse code
E) lasers were considered dangerous at the time

52. It can be understood from the passage that one of the inventors ----.

A) worked in a supermarket for many years
B) had invented Morse code several years earlier
C) got the idea while drawing in the sand
D) personally scanned the first packet of chewing gum
E) developed the first affordable laser for shops

53. According to the passage, perhaps the most important effect of barcodes on retail was that ----.

A) customers could pay with their smartphones
B) products became much cheaper to manufacture
C) fewer people were needed to stock shelves
D) shops could monitor precisely which products were sold
E) supermarkets could stay open for longer

54. The passage states that two-dimensional codes ----.

A) were invented many years before ordinary barcodes
B) contain more information and can be scanned with smartphones
C) can only be read by special and expensive lasers
D) are used mainly on packets of chewing gum and sweets
E) have now replaced all ordinary barcodes in supermarkets

Biomimicry is the practice of designing products and systems by imitating solutions found in nature. Its basic premise is that living organisms, shaped by millions of years of evolution, have already solved many of the problems that engineers face. One famous example is Velcro, which was invented after a Swiss engineer examined the tiny hooks on burrs that stuck to his dog's fur during a walk. More recent examples include the design of a Japanese high-speed train, whose front was redesigned to resemble the beak of a kingfisher, a bird that dives into water with very little splash. The new shape reduced the loud noise the train made when leaving tunnels and also lowered its energy consumption. Architects have studied termite mounds, which maintain a stable internal temperature despite extreme heat outside, to design buildings that require less air conditioning. Supporters argue that biomimicry can lead to more sustainable technologies. Critics note, however, that copying a form from nature does not automatically make a product environmentally friendly, since its materials and manufacturing process also matter.

55. According to the passage, the basic idea behind biomimicry is that ----.

A) nature has already developed solutions to many engineering problems
B) engineers should stop using modern materials altogether
C) animals can be trained to perform engineering tasks
D) evolution can be speeded up by modern technology
E) natural products are always better than artificial ones

56. The kingfisher's beak was used as a model for the train because ----.

A) the bird is able to fly faster than most trains
B) the bird's beak is extremely strong and light
C) the bird lives near railway lines in Japan
D) the bird makes a very loud noise when diving
E) the bird can enter water while making very little splash

57. Architects have studied termite mounds in order to ----.

A) find new and cheaper materials for building roads
B) prevent termites from damaging buildings
C) build much taller buildings in very hot countries
D) reduce the cost of building materials
E) design buildings that need less artificial cooling

58. The critics mentioned in the last sentence believe that ----.

A) biomimicry has so far produced no really useful inventions at all
B) a design inspired by nature is not necessarily good for the environment
C) Velcro was not really inspired by nature
D) engineers should not waste their time studying animals
E) termite mounds are far too complex for architects to copy

For much of the twentieth century, it was widely believed that the best way to reduce traffic congestion was to build more roads. Experience in many cities, however, has shown that this approach often fails. The phenomenon, known as induced demand, occurs because new or wider roads make driving more attractive, at least at first. People who previously used public transport, travelled at different times or did not make certain trips at all begin to drive instead. Within a few years, the new roads are as congested as the old ones. The reverse effect has also been observed. When roads have been closed or narrowed, traffic has not simply moved elsewhere in equal amounts; some of it has disappeared as people changed their habits. Transport planners have drawn practical lessons from these findings. Many cities now focus on improving public transport, cycling and walking, and on managing demand through measures such as congestion charges, rather than simply increasing road capacity.

59. According to the passage, building more roads often fails to reduce congestion because ----.

A) new roads are usually too narrow
B) new roads encourage more people to drive
C) public transport becomes cheaper
D) people stop making certain trips
E) drivers avoid using the new roads

60. It is stated in the passage that when roads were closed or narrowed, ----.

A) all the traffic moved to other roads in the same amounts
B) congestion became much worse in the city centre
C) some of the traffic disappeared as people changed their behaviour
D) more people started to drive their cars
E) public transport was used less than before

61. The phrase "the reverse effect" refers to ----.

A) an increase in traffic when new roads are built
B) a reduction in traffic when road space is reduced
C) the movement of people from cities to the countryside
D) the rising cost of building new roads
E) a decrease in the use of public transport

62. According to the passage, many cities now try to reduce congestion by ----.

A) building wider roads and motorways in city centres
B) banning public transport during rush hour
C) making driving much cheaper for local residents
D) permanently closing all of their roads to private cars
E) promoting alternatives to driving and managing demand

63. Ece: I've decided to take a gap year before starting university.
Mert: ----
Ece: I'm going to work for six months to save money, and then travel around South America.
Mert: That sounds amazing. You'll learn so much.

A) Which university have you been accepted to?
B) Really? What are you planning to do during that time?
C) Do your parents agree with your decision?
D) Are you worried that you'll forget what you've learned?
E) How long have you been thinking about it?

64. Customer: I ordered a blue jacket online, but I received a green one.
Assistant: I'm very sorry about that. ----
Customer: I'd prefer an exchange, if the blue one is still in stock.
Assistant: Let me check. Yes, we have it in your size.

A) Would you like a refund or an exchange?
B) When did you place your order?
C) Did you pay by credit card or bank transfer?
D) What size did you order?
E) Would you like to speak to the manager?

65. Doruk: I'm not sure whether to buy a new laptop or have my old one repaired.
Selin: ----
Doruk: About five years. It's been quite reliable until now.
Selin: Then it might be worth repairing it. New laptops are very expensive these days.

A) What's wrong with it exactly?
B) Which brand are you thinking of buying?
C) How much would the repair cost?
D) Do you use it mainly for work?
E) How long have you had the old one?

66. Teacher: Your essay is well written, but I think your conclusion is a bit weak.
Student: ----
Teacher: It simply repeats your introduction. Try to show what your argument means in a wider context.
Student: I see. I'll rewrite it this weekend.

A) Can I have an extension on the deadline?
B) Did the other students write better essays?
C) Should I use more sources next time?
D) What exactly is wrong with it?
E) How many marks did I get?

67. Leyla: Did you hear that the city is going to ban plastic bags?
Tarık: ----
Leyla: From next January. Shops will have to offer paper or reusable bags instead.
Tarık: Good. It's about time something was done.

A) Yes, and I think it's a terrible idea.
B) I always take a cloth bag to the shops anyway.
C) Are paper bags really better for the environment?
D) Which other cities have introduced similar bans?
E) No, I didn't. When does the ban come into effect?

D) Local communities introduced the new policy without any support.
E) Without the backing of local communities, the new policy will probably fail.

69. It took the engineers three years to design a bridge that could withstand strong earthquakes.

A) The engineers spent three years designing a bridge capable of resisting powerful earthquakes.
B) The bridge was destroyed by a strong earthquake three years after it was designed.
C) The engineers designed the bridge in three months despite the risk of earthquakes.
D) Strong earthquakes delayed the construction of the bridge for three years.
E) Three years ago, the engineers decided not to build a bridge in an earthquake zone.

70. He was the last person I expected to see at the conference.

A) He arrived at the conference after everyone else.
B) I expected him to be the first person at the conference.
C) He was the only person I saw at the conference.
D) I knew that he would definitely attend the conference.
E) I was very surprised to see him at the conference.

72. Every year, millions of tonnes of edible food are thrown away by supermarkets, restaurants and households. ---- Some countries have passed laws that require large supermarkets to donate unsold food to charities instead of destroying it. Apps have also been developed that allow restaurants to sell leftover meals cheaply at the end of the day.

A) Many people enjoy eating in restaurants at the weekend.
B) Supermarkets often place sweets near the checkout.
C) Food prices have risen sharply in many countries.
D) Some fruits are imported from the other side of the world.
E) In response, a number of initiatives have been launched to reduce this waste.

73. The first email was sent in 1971 by an engineer who was testing a system for sending messages between computers. ---- Within a few decades, however, email had become one of the most widely used forms of communication in the world, transforming the way people work and keep in touch.

A) Most office workers today receive dozens of emails every day, many of which they never read.
B) He later said that he could not remember what the message said and that it was probably a random string of letters.
C) The internet was developed partly for military purposes.
D) Some companies have even banned internal emails on Fridays in order to encourage face-to-face conversation.
E) Letters sent by post often took several days to arrive.

74. Many plants depend on animals to spread their seeds. Some produce sweet fruit that birds and mammals eat, later depositing the seeds far from the parent plant. ---- Burrs and other seeds with tiny hooks, for example, attach themselves to the fur of passing animals and fall off elsewhere.

A) Others rely on animals in a less obvious way.
B) Many birds migrate thousands of kilometres every year.
C) Some plants are poisonous to animals that eat them.
D) Fruit trees are often grown in large orchards.
E) Plants also need sunlight and water to grow.

75. Adults who learn to play a musical instrument often worry that they have started too late. ---- While children may find it easier to develop perfect pitch, adults are often better at understanding music theory and practising efficiently. Many adult learners reach a high level of skill within a few years.

A) The piano and the guitar are the most popular instruments among beginners.
B) Research suggests, however, that age is far less of an obstacle than many people believe.
C) Music lessons can be expensive, especially with a private teacher.
D) Children who play instruments often perform better at school.
E) Many famous composers began writing music at a very young age.

Puan hesaplama: YDS'de 80 sorunun her biri 1,25 puandır ve yanlışlar doğruları götürmez. 60 doğru = 75 puan; 64 doğru = 80 puan; 70 doğru = 87,5 puan.

Deneme sonrası: Yanlış ve boş bıraktığın her soru için çözümü oku, sonra soruyu çözümlere bakmadan yeniden çöz. Aynı türde iki kez yanlış yaptığın soruları Netfener'de konu konu çalış.

DENEME 6 · ÇÖZÜMLER

1 B contain Hükümetin çabalarına rağmen fiyatların yükselmesi, çabaların enflasyonu 'kontrol altına almak' (contain) olduğunu gösterir. 'inflate' (şişirmek) amaçla çelişir.

2 D markedly Birkaç gün içinde taburcu edilmesi beklendiğine göre durum 'belirgin biçimde' (markedly) iyileşmiştir. 'barely' (zar zor) bu beklentiyle çelişir.

3 C invaluable Ayrıntılı günlüklerin tarihçilere 'paha biçilmez' (invaluable) bilgi sağladığı söylenir. 'misleading', 'trivial' ve 'redundant' 'detailed journals' ile kurulan olumlu anlamla çelişir.

4 A obliges 'oblige sb to do' (… yapmaya zorunlu kılmak) yapısı to-infinitive ile kullanılır ve yasanın zorunluluğunu anlatır. 'prevent' ve 'exempt' 'from' ister; 'forbid' anlamı tersine çevirir.

5 E figure out Kazanın nedenini 'anlamak, çözmek' 'figure out' ile ifade edilir. 'give up' (vazgeçmek) ve 'show up' (ortaya çıkmak) 'what' yan cümlesini bu anlamda almaz.

6 B dismissed 'but they were later confirmed' zıtlığı, bulguların önce 'reddedildiğini, ciddiye alınmadığını' (dismissed) gösterir. 'praised' ve 'replicated' zıtlığı ortadan kaldırır.

7 E have been studying 'for over a decade' ve 'still' bugüne kadar süren bir eylemi gösterir: present perfect continuous 'have been studying'.

8 E which Virgüllü (tanımlamayan) ilgi cümlesinde cansız bir öncül için 'which' kullanılır; 'that' bu yapıda kullanılmaz.

9 C As long as you follow Sorun yaşamamanın koşulu talimatlara uymaktır: 'As long as you follow'. 'Unless' ve 'Even if you don't' anlamı bozar.

10 D about 'be excited about' (… için heyecanlı olmak) kalıbı doğrudur.

11 A has the city seen 'Rarely' cümle başına geldiğinde devrik yapı gerekir: 'has the city seen'.

12 C signing 'need + -ing' edilgen anlam taşır (imzalanması gerekir): 'need signing' = 'need to be signed'.

13 A were İkinci tip koşul cümlesinde 'if I were you' kalıbı kullanılır.

14 D than 'less likely ... than' karşılaştırma yapısı 'than' ile tamamlanır.

15 E Despite Boşluktan sonra -ing biçimi (having lived) geldiği için edat 'Despite' gerekir. 'Although' cümle ister; 'In spite' 'of' olmadan kullanılmaz.

16 D such 'such + a + sıfat + isim + that' sonuç kalıbıdır. 'so' doğrudan isim öbeğinden önce gelmez.

17 A by Edilgen yapıda (is kept in time) eylemi yapanı bildiren edat 'by' olur: gün ışığı tarafından ayarlanır.

18 C for example Gece vardiyası çalışanları, iç saatle çelişen rutinlere örnek olarak verilir: 'for example'.

19 B when 'Sosyal jet lag', insanlar hafta sonu geç yatıp hafta içi erken kalktığında yaşanır; zaman bildiren 'when' gerekir.

20 E on 'keep sth on track' (doğru yolda tutmak) sabit bir ifadedir.

21 A as little 'as little ... as possible' (mümkün olduğunca az) kalıbı sayılamayan 'disruption' ismiyle kullanılır. 'as much' anlamı tersine çevirir.

22 C Because Çok sayıda işçinin ölmesi, iş gücünün kıtlaşmasının nedenidir: 'Because'.

23 C keep Toprak sahipleri ve hükümetler ücretleri önceki düzeyde 'tutmaya' çalışmıştır: 'keep wages at their previous levels'. 'raise' ve 'double' amaçla çelişir.

24 B in which Boşluktan sonra tam bir cümle gelir (peasants were legally bound ...); sistemi niteleyen ve 'içinde' anlamı veren 'in which' gerekir.

25 E as Şehirlerin karantina önlemleri getirmesi, tıp ve halk sağlığındaki değişikliklere örnek/açıklama olarak verilir; 'as' (… -dığı için/gibi) uygun bağlaçtır.

26 B while Bazı tarihçilerin iddiası ile diğerlerinin şüphesi karşılaştırılır: 'while' (… -iken).

27 D When a violent storm destroyed most of their equipment Ana kampa dönmeye zorlanmanın nedeni verilir: şiddetli bir fırtına ekipmanın çoğunu yok ettiğinde. Diğerleri dönmeyi açıklamaz ya da çelişir.

28 A its battery life is disappointing compared with other models 'Although' zıtlık ister: kamera etkileyici olmasına rağmen pil ömrü hayal kırıcıdır. Diğer seçenekler olumlu bilgiyi sürdürür.

29 E after testing it on thousands of volunteers over several years Güvenli olduğu sonucuna nasıl varıldığı açıklanır: binlerce gönüllü üzerinde yıllarca test edildikten sonra. 'even though none ... reported side effects' zıtlık kurmaz, aksine destekler; bu nedenle bağlaç yanlıştır.

30 D the damage caused by the floods might have been much less severe Üçüncü tip koşul (had acted) 'might/would have + V3' ister: sel hasarı çok daha az ciddi olabilirdi.

31 B that devices which were considered advanced five years ago now seem outdated Devrik 'So rapidly has ... developed' yapısı 'that' ile sonuç cümlesi ister.

32 C if it is carefully designed to reinforce what has been learnt in class 'only if' (ancak ... ise) koşul bildirir: ev ödevi ancak sınıfta öğrenileni pekiştirecek şekilde tasarlanırsa faydalıdır.

33 A so have concerns about the damage to its fragile ecosystem 'As X has increased, so have Y' yapısı paralel artışı anlatır: turist sayısı arttıkça kırılgan ekosisteme verilen zararla ilgili endişeler de arttı.

34 B Given the importance that society places on exam results 'Given ...' (… göz önüne alındığında) bir gerekçe sunar: toplumun sınav sonuçlarına verdiği önem göz önüne alındığında öğrencilerin kaygılı olması şaşırtıcı değildir.

35 A hoping that this will improve staff satisfaction and reduce office costs Kararın amacı ortaç yapısıyla verilir: personel memnuniyetini artırmayı ve ofis maliyetlerini azaltmayı umarak. Diğerleri zaman ya da anlam bakımından uymaz.

36 E some experts believe it will never fully replace human judgement 'No matter how ...' (ne kadar ... olursa olsun) bir sınırlama ister: yapay zekâ ne kadar gelişirse gelişsin, bazı uzmanlar onun insan yargısının yerini asla tam olarak alamayacağına inanıyor.

37 D Bir çocuğun okul öncesi eğitimden ne ölçüde yararlandığı, sınıfta geçirilen saat sayısın… 'The extent to which ...' = '... ne ölçüde ...'; 'depends largely on ... rather than on ...' = '...dan çok büyük ölçüde ...e bağlıdır'. Diğerleri karşılaştırmayı tersine çevirir ya da eşitler.

38 A İnternetin bilgiye erişme biçimimizi dönüştürdüğünü pek az kişi inkâr eder, ancak onun o… 'Few would deny that ...' = 'pek az kişi ... inkâr eder' (yani çoğu kabul eder); 'are still being debated' = 'hâlâ tartışılmaktadır'. Diğer seçenekler kabulü inkâra çevirir ya da tartışmalı olanı kesinleştirir.

39 C İlk insan göçleri hakkında bildiklerimizin çoğu, kemik ve dişlerden elde edilen antik DN… 'Much of what we know about ... comes from ...' = '... hakkında bildiklerimizin çoğu ...dan gelmektedir'; 'ancient DNA extracted from bones and teeth' = 'kemik ve dişlerden elde edilen antik DNA'.

40 C Many countries are increasing their investment in renewable energy sources in order to r… 'bağımlılığını azaltmak amacıyla' = 'in order to reduce their dependence on'; 'yatırımlarını artırmaktadır' = 'are increasing their investment'.

41 D The researchers emphasised that the initial findings were promising but that more extens… 'ilk bulguların umut verici olduğunu ancak daha kapsamlı çalışmalara ihtiyaç duyulduğunu vurguladı' = 'emphasised that the initial findings were promising but that more extensive studies were needed'.

42 E Air pollution in the city reached such a serious level that the authorities had to close… 'öylesine ciddi bir boyuta ulaştı ki ... kapatmak zorunda kaldı' = 'reached such a serious level that ... had to close'.

43 D act as a safety copy for seed collections held in other countries Metne göre kasa, farklı ülkelerdeki yaklaşık bin yedi yüz tohum bankası için bir yedek olarak tasarlanmıştır.

44 C the frozen ground would protect the seeds even if the cooling system stopped Permafrost, soğutma sistemi bozulsa bile tohumları donmuş tutar; ayrıca yer, buzlar erise bile kuru kalacak kadar yüksektir.

45 E can only be withdrawn by the countries that deposited them Tohum bırakan ülkeler mülkiyetlerini korur ve onları geri çekmeye yalnızca bu ülkeler yetkilidir.

46 E show that the vault has proved useful in a real situation Son cümleye göre bu olay kasanın yalnızca sembolik olmadığını, pratik bir amaca hizmet ettiğini göstermiştir.

47 D leads people to favour information that matches their existing beliefs Tanıma göre onaylama yanlılığı, bilgiyi zaten inandığımız şeyi destekleyecek biçimde arama, yorumlama ve hatırlama eğilimidir.

48 A the same evidence made both groups more certain of their original opinions Aynı iki raporu okuyan iki grup birbirine yaklaşmak yerine kendi görüşlerine daha çok bağlanmıştır.

49 D constantly questioning our beliefs would require too much mental effort Psikologlara göre bu yanlılık kısmen zihinsel çabadan tasarruf sağladığı için vardır; her yeni bilgide inançlarımızı yeniden incelemek yorucu olurdu.

50 E can lead to important information being overlooked Erken bir teşhis koyan doktorun farklı bir hastalığa işaret eden belirtileri gözden kaçırabilmesi, bu yanlılığın önemli bilgilerin göz ardı edilmesine yol açabileceğini gösterir.

51 B pushes seawater through membranes that separate water from salt Ters ozmozda deniz suyu yüksek basınçla su moleküllerinin geçmesine izin veren ama tuzu engelleyen zarlardan geçirilir.

52 B the process consumes a great deal of energy Metne göre teknik eski yöntemlerden verimli olsa da hâlâ büyük miktarda enerji gerektirir ve bu da suyu çok daha pahalı yapar.

53 A lowering the amount of oxygen near the seabed Denize geri pompalanan tuzlu atık deniz tabanına çökebilir ve oksijen seviyelerini düşürerek deniz yaşamına zarar verebilir.

54 A reduce both the cost and the environmental impact of desalination Mühendisler tesisleri güneş enerjisiyle çalıştırmanın ve tuzlu atıktan faydalı mineraller çıkarmanın yollarını araştırarak süreci hem ucuzlatmayı hem daha az zararlı yapmayı umar.

55 D is a popular belief that is not supported by evidence Metin bu ayrımı popüler psikolojideki en kalıcı mitlerden biri olarak tanımlar ve araştırmaların bunu desteklemediğini belirtir.

56 B showed that the two halves of the brain have different specialities 1960'lardaki araştırmalar beynin iki yarısının farklı görevlerde uzmanlaştığını keşfetmiştir; örneğin dil çoğu insanda ağırlıklı olarak sol yarıda işlenir.

57 D people do not generally use one hemisphere more than the other Bin kişiden fazlasının beyin taramasını inceleyen çalışma, bazı kişilerin genel olarak bir yarıküreyi diğerinden daha fazla kullandığına dair kanıt bulamamıştır.

58 B relies on networks across both sides of the brain Son cümleye göre yaratıcılık her iki yarıküreye yayılan ağlara bağlı görünmektedir.

59 A they can examine distant collections without travelling Brezilya'daki bir tarihçinin Almanya'daki bir el yazmasını evinden çıkmadan inceleyebilmesi örneğiyle, araştırmacıların uzak koleksiyonları seyahat etmeden inceleyebildiği anlatılır.

60 E the originals are touched and moved less frequently Dijitalleştirme kırılgan orijinalleri korur, çünkü onlara daha az dokunulması gerekir.

61 D today's digital records can no longer be read in the future Bazı arşivciler, kendi zamanımıza ait kayıtların gelecek kuşaklar için okunamaz hâle geleceği bir 'dijital karanlık çağ' yaratıyor olabileceğimiz konusunda uyarır.

62 C may influence which aspects of the past become more visible Son cümleye göre kurumların öncelik verdiği öğeler, tarihin hangi kısımlarının daha fazla ilgi göreceğini şekillendirebilir.

63 E That's great news, but how does your family feel about moving? Ozan'ın 'Sorun da bu; eşim burada yeni bir işe başladı, çocuklar okullarını seviyor' cevabı, Pınar'ın ailesinin taşınma konusunda ne düşündüğünü sorduğunu gösterir.

64 C I'm sorry to hear that. May I ask why you've decided to cancel? Müşterinin iptal nedenini açıklayan cevabı ('çok pahalı ve nadiren gelebiliyorum'), görevlinin neden iptal etmek istediğini sorduğunu gösterir.

65 C To be honest, I didn't find it very impressive. Elif'in 'Gerçekten mi? Okuduğum eleştiriler çok olumluydu' tepkisi, Kaan'ın sergiyi beğenmediğini söylediğini gösterir.

66 B We keep getting results that are completely different from what we expected. Danışmanın örneklerin saklama sıcaklığını kontrol etmeyi önermesi, araştırmacının beklenmedik sonuçlar aldığını söylediğini gösterir.

67 C Really? What made you choose Japanese? Sinan'ın 'Kısmen Japon filmlerini sevdiğim için, kısmen de ...' cevabı, Deniz'in neden Japonca seçtiğini sorduğunu gösterir.

68 B The project was delayed not so much because of insufficient funds as because of the abse… Projeyi geciktiren paranın azlığından çok güvenilir veri eksikliğidir; 'not so much A as B' yapısı aynı anlamı verir.

69 C Few of the applicants fulfilled every condition needed for the job. 'Only a small number ... met all the requirements' = 'adayların pek azı tüm koşulları karşıladı'.

70 A The company survived the crisis only because it cut its costs significantly. Devrik koşul ('had it not reduced') gerçekte şirketin maliyetleri büyük ölçüde düşürdüğünü ve bu sayede krizi atlattığını ima eder.

71 A The moment the results were made public, the students hurried to phone their parents. 'As soon as' = 'The moment' (… -ır -maz). Sonuçlar açıklanır açıklanmaz öğrenciler ailelerini aramaya koştu.

72 B More recent research, however, has shown that the picture is more complicated. Boşluk eski uyarı ile onu sorgulayan bilimsel açıklama arasındadır; 'More recent research, however, ...' cümlesi geçişi sağlar.

73 A From the 1930s onwards, however, most of these networks were dismantled. Boşluktan sonra tramvayların neden gözden düştüğü açıklanır; boşluğa bu ağların 1930'lardan itibaren söküldüğünü söyleyen cümle gelmelidir.

74 D The philosophy behind the technique is that breakage is not something to be ashamed of. Boşluktan sonraki 'In this way, the history of the object ... becomes part of its beauty' cümlesi, boşluğa tekniğin ardındaki felsefeyi açıklayan cümlenin geldiğini gösterir.

75 B Within a colony, individuals perform different roles according to a strict division of l… Boşluktan sonra farklı görevler sıralanır (yiyecek toplama, yavru bakımı, savunma); boşluğa iş bölümünü tanıtan cümle gelmelidir.

76 D (IV) Chinese cuisine varies greatly from one region to another. Parça Çin Seddi'nin yapısını ve bugünkü durumunu anlatır. IV. cümle Çin mutfağının bölgesel çeşitliliğine geçerek akışı bozar.

77 B (II) Coffee contains more caffeine than tea and is particularly popular in Scandinavia. Parça çay içme alışkanlığının Avrupa'ya yayılışını anlatır. II. cümle kahvenin kafein miktarı ve İskandinavya'daki popülerliğine geçerek akışı bozar.

78 E (V) Petrol prices have risen sharply in many countries over the past year. Parça elektrikli scooterların faydalarını, sorunlarını ve getirilen kuralları anlatır. V. cümle benzin fiyatlarına geçerek konudan sapar.

79 C (III) Some birds, such as parrots, are well known for their ability to imitate human spe… Parça bazı kuşların aynada kendini tanıma yeteneğini anlatır. III. cümle papağanların insan konuşmasını taklit etmesine geçer; IV. cümledeki 'This ability' II. cümledeki kendini tanımaya bağlanır.

80 E (V) Watches made in Switzerland are among the most expensive in the world. Parça mekanik saatin insanların hayatını düzenleme biçimini nasıl değiştirdiğini anlatır. V. cümle İsviçre saatlerinin pahalılığına geçerek konudan sapar.

DENEME 7 · ÇÖZÜMLER

49 E were made to work against their will in difficult conditions Metne göre işçilerin çoğu ağır koşullarda çalışan zorla çalıştırılan işçilerdi.

50 D illustrate how much the world economy still depends on the canal Dev bir konteyner gemisinin altı gün kanalda sıkışıp küresel tedarik zincirlerini aksatması, kanalın önemini göstermek için verilmiştir.

51 E separated from emissions and stored underground Metne göre gaz santrallerin ya da fabrikaların emisyonlarından ayrılır, sıkıştırılır ve yerin derinliklerinde depolanmak üzere taşınır.

52 B their production processes release carbon dioxide that renewable energy cannot eliminate Bu sanayiler kimyasal süreçlerinin bir parçası olarak karbondioksit salar ve kolayca yenilenebilir enerjiye geçemez.

53 C Stored carbon dioxide often leaks back into the air. Metinde yavaş gelişme, yüksek maliyet, emisyonların çok küçük bir kısmının yakalanması ve emisyon azaltmayı geciktirme bahanesi geçer; depolanan gazın sızmasından söz edilmez.

54 A presents both the potential benefits and the limitations of CCS Yazar önce destekçilerin, sonra eleştirmenlerin görüşlerini aktararak teknolojinin hem olası faydalarını hem de sınırlılıklarını sunar.

55 E genes explain only a minor part of the differences in lifespan İkiz çalışmaları, genetiğin insanların ne kadar yaşadığındaki farklılığın yalnızca yaklaşık dörtte birini açıkladığını göstermiştir.

56 D Regular visits to gyms and fitness centres Metne göre bu bölgelerde fiziksel etkinlik resmî egzersizle değil günlük rutinin parçası olarak yapılır; spor salonlarına düzenli gitmekten söz edilmez, hatta bu metinle çelişir.

57 E the recorded ages of some people may not be accurate Bazı bilim insanları, doğum kayıtları her zaman doğru olmadığı için bazı bölgelerdeki yaş verilerinin güvenilmez olabileceği uyarısında bulunur.

58 B the lifestyle habits seen in blue zones are supported by other research Son cümleye göre gözlemlenen yaşam tarzı örüntüleri sağlıklı yaşlanmaya ilişkin diğer çalışmaların kanıtlarıyla tutarlıdır.

59 B describe the location of objects using compass directions rather than left and right Bazı dillerde konuşurlar, yakındaki küçük nesneler için bile 'sol' ve 'sağ' yerine kuzey, güney gibi sabit coğrafi yönleri kullanır.

60 A illustrate how such a system is used in everyday situations Bu örnek, sabit coğrafi yönlere dayalı sistemin küçük ve gündelik durumlarda bile nasıl kullanıldığını göstermek için verilmiştir.

61 B are very good at keeping track of their orientation Araştırmalar bu kişilerin, yabancı binalarda bile yönlerini akılda tutmada dikkat çekici derecede başarılı olduğunu göstermiştir.

62 D culture and environment may affect both language and spatial thinking Daha temkinli araştırmacılar, bir topluluğun çevresi ve kültürünün hem dilini hem uzamsal düşüncesini etkileyebileceğini, dilin düşünceyi doğrudan etkilemeyebileceğini öne sürer.

63 E But you give presentations to your team at work all the time, don't you? Gizem'in 'Doğru, yapıyorum. Belki sadece dinleyici daha kalabalık olacağı için gerginim' cevabı, Tuna'nın onun zaten iş yerinde sunum yaptığını hatırlattığını gösterir.

64 E It is, but I'm afraid the train has just left. Yolcunun 'Eyvah! Bir sonrakini ne kadar bekleyeceğim?' tepkisi, trenin az önce kalktığını öğrendiğini gösterir.

65 C Yes, I finished it hours ago. Annenin 'Gerçekten mi? O zaman tarih kitabın neden hâlâ açık?' sorusu, oğlunun ödevini çoktan bitirdiğini iddia ettiğini gösterir.

66 A Why? What's wrong with the one we've chosen? Mühendisin 'Çünkü mevcut tasarım duvarların güvenle taşıyamayacağı kadar ağır' cevabı, mimarın neden farklı malzeme gerektiğini sorduğunu gösterir.

67 C Which subject do you find more interesting? İrem'in 'Bence tıp; insan vücudunun nasıl çalıştığı beni hep büyülemiştir' cevabı ve Bora'nın 'tutkulu olduğun şeyi seçmelisin' sonucu, hangi konunun daha ilgi çekici olduğunun sorulduğunu gösterir.

68 B Although people initially laughed at the scientist's theory, it came to be widely accept… Kuram önce alaya alınmış, ama sonunda geniş kabul görmüştür. Diğer seçenekler sırayı, özneyi ya da sonucu değiştirir.

69 A You needn't have brought an umbrella because sunny weather had been forecast. 'There was no need for you to bring' = 'You needn't have brought' (getirmene gerek yoktu, ama getirdin).

70 C I enjoyed the film much more than I thought I would. 'far more enjoyable than I had expected' = 'beklediğimden çok daha keyifliydi'.

71 C The fire is believed to have been started on purpose. 'It is thought that the fire was started' = 'The fire is believed to have been started'; 'deliberately' = 'on purpose'.

72 D It comes from a Czech word meaning 'forced labour'. Boşluktan önce 'robot' kelimesinin ilk kullanımından söz edilir; boşluğa kelimenin kökenini açıklayan ve oyundaki 'işçi' rolüne bağlanan cümle gelir.

73 A However, experiments have shown that they can actually remember things for months. Boşluk yaygın bir inanç ile onu çürüten deneyler arasında yer alır; 'However, experiments have shown ...' cümlesi geçişi sağlar.

74 E These were intended to help them detect when others had copied their work. Boşluktan sonra rakibin haritasında aynı hayalî sokağın bulunmasının kopyalama kanıtı olduğu söylenir; boşluğa bu sokakların amacını açıklayan cümle gelir.

75 C Researchers believe this is partly because children spend more time indoors studying and… Boşluktan sonra okulların çocuklara dışarıda daha fazla zaman tanıdığı sonucu verilir; boşluğa bunun nedenini (içeride daha çok zaman, daha az doğal ışık) açıklayan cümle gelmelidir.

76 E (V) Spain is also famous for its oranges, which are exported to many countries. Parça zeytin ağacının tarihini, dayanıklılığını ve kullanım alanlarını anlatır. V. cümle İspanya portakallarına geçerek konudan sapar.

77 C (III) Dreams usually occur during a stage of sleep known as REM sleep. Parça uykusuzluğu ve tedavisini anlatır. III. cümle rüyaların hangi uyku evresinde görüldüğüne geçerek akışı bozar.

78 E (V) Many children dream of becoming astronauts when they grow up. Parça Hubble Uzay Teleskobu'nu ve katkılarını anlatır. V. cümle çocukların astronot olma hayaline geçerek konudan uzaklaşır.

79 D (IV) Plastic packaging is one of the main sources of household waste. Parça kompostlamanın faydalarını anlatır. IV. cümle plastik ambalajlara geçerek konudan sapar; V. cümle kompost konusuna geri döner.

DENEME 8 · ÇÖZÜMLER

1 C ambiguous Hem destekçilerin hem karşıtların konuşmayı kendi bakışlarına göre yorumlayabilmesi, konuşmanın 'muğlak, iki anlamlı' (ambiguous) olduğunu gösterir. 'explicit' (açık) tam tersidir.

2 A devise Virüs tanımlandıktan sonra hızlı bir test 'tasarlamak, geliştirmek' (devise) anlamlıdır. Diğer fiiller bağlama uymaz.

3 B dependent 'dependent on' (… -e bağımlı) kalıbı ve ziyaretçi düşüşünün ciddi sorunlara yol açması bu anlamı destekler.

4 C reinforced Kanıt, müvekkilin suç gecesi evde olduğunu kesin biçimde gösterdiğine göre savunmanın iddiasını 'güçlendirmiştir' (reinforce). 'contradicted' (çelişmek) ve 'exaggerated' (abartmak) 'as it showed ...' gerekçesiyle uyuşmaz.

5 A leave behind Deniz seviyesinin yükselmesi insanları evlerini 'geride bırakmaya' (leave behind) zorlayabilir. 'get over' (atlatmak) ve 'make up for' (telafi etmek) bağlama uymaz.

6 A laid off Maliyetleri azaltmak için işçileri 'işten çıkarmak' 'lay off' ile anlatılır. 'took on' (işe almak) amaçla çelişir.

7 E ended 'By the time' + simple past ile ana cümlede past perfect kullanılır: 'By the time the film ended, ... had fallen asleep'.

8 C to have found 'be believed to have + V3' geçmişte yapılmış olduğu düşünülen bir eylemi anlatır: 'are believed to have found'.

9 A whose Boşluktan sonraki 'inhabitants' köye aittir; iyelik bildiren 'whose' gerekir.

10 E Should 'Should you need ...' = 'If you need ...' (resmî devrik koşul yapısı).

11 B than Üstünlük karşılaştırması 'than' ile kurulur: 'much easier than I had expected'.

12 C not accepting 'regret + -ing' geçmişte yapılan bir şeyden pişmanlık duymayı anlatır: 'regrets not accepting'.

13 E have 'It is essential that' resmî yapıda yalın fiil (subjunctive) ister: 'every passenger have'.

14 C themselves Ebeveynlerin 'kendi konuşmalarını' duyamaması dönüşlü zamirle anlatılır: 'hear themselves talking'.

15 D on Belirli bir tarihten önce 'on' edatı kullanılır: 'on 1 January'.

16 E so much on / as 'not so much on A as on B' = 'A'dan çok B'ye'. Diğer seçenekler kalıbı bozar.

17 D as 'use sth as' (bir şeyi ... olarak kullanmak) kalıbı: 'used them as a form of currency'.

18 D who Boşluk 'the aristocracy' (aristokrasi; insanlar) ismini niteler ve özne görevindedir: 'who'.

19 E when 'the nineteenth century' bir zaman dilimidir ve ardından tam bir cümle gelir: 'when new machines made it possible'.

20 D However Çikolatanın milyarlarca dolarlık bir sektör olması ile kakao yetiştiren çiftçilerin çok az kazanması zıttır: 'However'.

21 E whom 'many of whom' yapısında edattan sonra insanlar için nesne konumundaki ilgi zamiri 'whom' kullanılır.

22 E however Filmlerdeki panik görüntüsü ile gerçek araştırmaların ortaya koyduğu farklı tablo zıttır: 'however'.

23 A Rather than İnsanların bencilce davranmak 'yerine' birbirine yardım ettiği söylenir: 'Rather than'.

24 D which Virgülden sonra önceki fikre (ortak kimlik duygusu) gönderme yapan ve özne olan ilgi zamiri 'which' olur.

25 B If Yetkililer halkın panikleyeceğini varsayarsa bilgi saklayabilir: koşul bağlacı 'If'.

26 A rather 'rather than' (… yerine) kalıbı: halkı bir sorun yerine bir kaynak olarak görmek.

27 E farmers have managed to grow crops there using ancient irrigation techniques 'Although' zıtlık ister: bölge çok az yağış almasına rağmen çiftçiler eski sulama teknikleriyle ürün yetiştirmeyi başarmıştır. Diğerleri yağış azlığının beklenen sonuçlarıdır.

28 C so that consumers can make better-informed choices about what they eat Kuralların amacı: tüketicilerin yedikleri hakkında daha bilinçli seçimler yapabilmesi (so that). 'which had been discussed' öncülüne bağlanamaz; diğerleri amaç bildirmez.

29 B If she had left the office ten minutes earlier Ana cümledeki 'would have been able' üçüncü tip koşul ister: 'If she had left ... earlier'.

30 C by sending chemical signals through networks of fungi in the soil İletişimin nasıl gerçekleştiğini açıklayan yöntem gerekir: topraktaki mantar ağları aracılığıyla kimyasal sinyaller göndererek. 'which had been planted' ve 'whose leaves' öncüle bağlanamaz; 'unless' ve 'so that ... had been able' anlamı ve zaman uyumunu bozar.

31 A after a burst pipe flooded several of its galleries Geçici kapanmanın nedeni: patlayan bir boru birkaç galeriyi su bastırdıktan sonra. Koleksiyonun büyümesi kapanmayı açıklamaz; 'unless it receives' zaman uyumunu, 'so that more visitors could see' anlamı bozar.

32 D that the theatre decided to cancel the rest of the season 'So few ... that ...' sonuç kalıbıdır: o kadar az kişi katıldı ki tiyatro sezonun geri kalanını iptal etmeye karar verdi.

33 C some argue that it has also made our relationships more superficial 'While it is true that ...' (… doğru olsa da) bir kabulün ardından karşı bir görüş ister: bazıları teknolojinin ilişkilerimizi yüzeyselleştirdiğini savunuyor.

34 C who have not responded to other forms of therapy 'patients' ismini niteleyen ve tedavinin kimler için önerildiğini belirleyen ilgi cümlesi gerekir: diğer tedavilere yanıt vermemiş hastalar.

35 B whereas others do their best work late at night 'whereas' iki grup arasında karşıtlık kurar: bazıları sabah daha kolay odaklanırken, diğerleri en iyi işlerini gece geç saatte yapar.

36 C that the authorities admitted it had not been inspected for years 'It was only after ... that ...' vurgulama kalıbı 'that' ile tamamlanır.

37 C Pek çok kişinin inandığının aksine yarasalar kör değildir; çoğu tür oldukça iyi görebili… 'Contrary to what many people believe' = 'pek çok kişinin inandığının aksine'; 'although they rely mainly on sound' = 'ancak esas olarak sese güvenirler'. Diğer seçenekler kör olmama bilgisini ya da sesin rolünü değiştirir.

38 A Barajın inşa edilmesi kararı, birkaç nesli tükenmekte olan türün yaşam alanlarını yok ed… 'was taken despite warnings that ...' = '... yönündeki uyarılara rağmen alındı'. Diğerleri kararın iptal edildiğini, sıranın değiştiğini ya da barajın başka yere yapıldığını söyler.

39 E Bu romanı yazarın önceki eserlerinden ayıran şey, dramatik olaylardan çok karakterlerini… 'What distinguishes ... is ...' = '...i ayıran şey ...dır'; 'rather than on dramatic events' = 'dramatik olaylardan çok'. Diğerleri karşılaştırmayı tersine çevirir ya da 'en başarılı' gibi eklemeler yapar.

40 C Experts state that it is not possible to predict exactly when earthquakes will occur wit… 'ne zaman olacağını kesin olarak tahmin etmenin şu anki teknolojiyle mümkün olmadığını' = 'it is not possible to predict exactly when earthquakes will occur with current technology'.

41 A The author of the book claims to have personally witnessed most of the events described … 'bizzat tanık olduğunu iddia etmektedir' = 'claims to have personally witnessed'; 'eserinde ele aldığı olayların çoğuna' = 'most of the events described in his work'.

42 B The spread of internet access in developing countries has created significant opportunit… 'internet erişiminin yaygınlaşması' = 'The spread of internet access'; 'eğitime erişimde önemli fırsatlar yaratmıştır' = 'has created significant opportunities in access to education'.

43 D have not been reliable enough to predict specific earthquakes Metne göre incelenen olası uyarı işaretlerinin hiçbiri belirli uyarılar yapmaya yetecek kadar güvenilir çıkmamıştır.

44 E calculate the chances of a large earthquake in a region over several decades Bilim insanları bir fayın geçmişini inceleyip kayalardaki gerilimi ölçerek, bir bölgede onlarca yıl içinde büyük bir deprem olma olasılığını hesaplayabilir.

45 D they help authorities decide where buildings must be made stronger Bu tahminler, hükümetlerin daha sıkı yapı yönetmeliklerini nerede uygulayacaklarına karar vermelerine yardımcı olur.

46 C give only a few seconds' notice but can still reduce damage Erken uyarı sistemleri yalnızca saniyeler kazandırır, ancak bu süre trenleri durdurmak, gaz hatlarını kapatmak ve insanların korunması için yeterli olabilir.

47 B the steady increase in average intelligence test scores over many decades Flynn etkisi, yirminci yüzyılın başından beri birçok ülkede zekâ testlerindeki ortalama puanların on yılda yaklaşık üç puan istikrarlı biçimde artmasıdır.

48 A genetic changes could not happen in such a short period Metne göre genetik değişiklikler bu kadar kısa sürede gerçekleşemeyeceği için az sayıda araştırmacı insanların gerçekten daha zeki olduğuna inanır.

49 D Increased physical exercise among children Metinde beslenme, sağlık hizmetleri, eğitim ve modern teknoloji geçer; çocuklar arasında fiziksel egzersizin artmasından söz edilmez.

50 B the rise in test scores has stopped or reversed in some countries Son cümleye göre bazı gelişmiş ülkelerde Flynn etkisi son on yıllarda yavaşlamış, hatta tersine dönmüş görünmektedir.

51 C water once flowed on the surface of Mars İlk görevler, yörüngedeki uzay araçlarının önerdiği şeyi doğrulamıştır: Mars yüzeyinde bir zamanlar sıvı su akmıştır.

52 A these molecules can also be formed by non-living processes Bilim insanları, bu moleküllerin canlı organizmalar olmadan da üretilebileceğini vurgular.

53 D they can be studied on Earth with much more advanced instruments Örnekler gelecekteki bir görevle Dünya'ya getirilecek ve Mars'a gönderilebilecek her şeyden çok daha gelişmiş aletlerle incelenebilecektir.

54 E Mars once had conditions that could have supported life, though life has not been proved Son cümleye göre rover'lar eski Mars'ın yaşam için uygun koşullara sahip olduğunu göstermiştir; ancak yaşamın varlığı henüz kanıtlanmamıştır.

55 A seen as a sign of loneliness and isolation Metne göre bu eğilim eskiden endişeyle karşılanmıştır, çünkü yalnız yaşamak yalnızlık ve yalıtılmışlıkla ilişkilendirilmiştir.

56 B positive social changes such as financial independence and longer lives Sosyologlar artışı ekonomik bağımsızlık, uzun yaşam süresi ve yaşlıların kendi evlerinde kalmasını sağlayan refah sistemleri gibi olumlu gelişmelere bağlar.

57 D often have active social lives and are not always more isolated Araştırmalar yalnız yaşayanların mutlaka daha yalıtılmış olmadığını, birçoğunun aktif sosyal yaşamı olduğunu ve arkadaşlarıyla daha fazla zaman geçirdiğini gösterir.

58 B there may not be enough small and affordable homes Aileler için tasarlanmış şehirlerde yalnız yaşayanların ihtiyaç duyduğu küçük ve uygun fiyatlı evler eksik olabilir.

59 B slow and costly because goods were loaded individually Konteynerlerden önce yükler gemilere tek tek yükleniyordu; bu süreç günler sürebiliyor, nakliyeyi yavaş ve pahalı yapıyordu.

60 A they allow goods to be transferred between different types of transport easily Sabit boyutlar sayesinde konteynerler içindeki mallar hiç boşaltılmadan vinçlerle gemiden trene ve kamyona doğrudan aktarılabilir.

61 B greatly reducing the cost of transporting goods Ekonomistlere göre nakliye maliyetlerindeki bu düşüş küreselleşmenin önemli bir itici gücü olmuştur.

62 A traditional port communities declined because fewer workers were needed Daha az liman işçisine ihtiyaç duyulduğu için geleneksel liman toplulukları gerilemiş ve yeni limanlar eski şehir merkezlerinden uzağa kurulmuştur.

63 B Would the dog have to be alone for long periods during the day? Neşe'nin 'Pek değil; çoğu gün evden çalışıyorum' cevabı, Alp'in köpeğin gün içinde uzun süre yalnız kalıp kalmayacağını sorduğunu gösterir.

64 D Absolutely delighted, especially after such a difficult start to the season. Muhabirin 'İlk beş maçınızın üçünü kaybettiniz' hatırlatması, koçun zor bir sezon başlangıcından söz ettiğini gösterir.

42 E The sudden increase in the number of visitors has put serious pressure on the island's f… 'Ziyaretçi sayısındaki ani artış' = 'The sudden increase in the number of visitors'; 'ciddi bir baskı oluşturmuştur' = 'has put serious pressure on'.

43 C may have provided the extra energy needed for the brain to grow Kurama göre pişirme, yiyeceklerden çok daha fazla enerji elde edilmesini sağlamış ve bu ek enerji beynin büyümesini mümkün kılmıştır.

44 B uses about twenty per cent of the body's energy Metne göre insan beyni vücut enerjisinin yaklaşık beşte birini tüketir.

45 E humans adapted to eating food that had been softened by cooking Daha küçük diş, çene ve sindirim sistemi, pişmiş yumuşak yiyeceklerle beslenmeye uyum sağlandığının ve çiğ yiyecekleri işlemek için bunlara ihtiyaç kalmadığının kanıtı olarak sunulur.

46 C when humans began to use fire and cook regularly Eleştirmenler pişirmenin önemini kabul eder ama zamanlamasını sorgular: ateşin düzenli kullanımına dair açık kanıtlar çok daha geç ortaya çıkar.

47 D fewer options led to more purchases even though the larger display attracted more people Büyük vitrin daha çok ziyaretçi çekmiş, ama yalnızca altı çeşit gören alışverişçilerin kavanoz satın alma olasılığı yaklaşık on kat daha yüksek olmuştur.

48 B be less happy with their final decision Çok sayıda seçenekle karşılaşan insanlar kararı erteleyebilir, hiçbir şey seçmeyebilir ya da sonunda seçtikleri seçenekten daha az memnun kalabilir.

49 C people do not know much about the products and find them hard to compare Metne göre etki, insanlar ürünlere yabancı olduğunda, seçenekleri karşılaştırmak zor olduğunda ve karar önemli hissedildiğinde en güçlüdür.

50 D show that a large number of choices is not a problem for everyone Uzmanların geniş seçenek yelpazesini memnuniyetle karşılaması, aşırı seçenek etkisinin evrensel olmadığını gösterir.

51 D a sudden event in which a great deal of knowledge was lost at once Yıkımı sıklıkla tek bir felaket olayı, genellikle bir yangın olarak ve antik bilginin çoğunun bir günde kaybolduğu biçimde sunulur.

52 E continued to function for a long time after it was first damaged Kütüphane birkaç kez hasar görmüş, ancak MÖ 48'deki yangından sonra da yüzyıllarca faaliyetini sürdürmüş görünmektedir.

53 D a gradual loss of money and political interest Düşüşün muhtemelen esas nedeni, birbirini izleyen yöneticilerin bilime daha az ilgi göstermesiyle finansman ve siyasi destek eksikliğidir.

54 B reflects people's preference for simple explanations Tarihçilere göre tek bir dramatik yangın hikâyesi, gerçekte ne olduğundan çok bizim basit açıklamalara duyduğumuz istek hakkında bilgi verir.

55 A seagrass is less visually impressive than coral Metne göre bu kayıp, belki deniz çayırları daha az gösterişli göründüğü için mercan resiflerinin azalmasından çok daha az ilgi görür.

56 E They provide a source of food for coastal communities. Metinde yavru balıklar için yuva, kıyı erozyonunu önleme, dalgaları yavaşlatma ve karbon depolama geçer; kıyı toplulukları için doğrudan besin kaynağı olmasından söz edilmez.

57 D meadows cover a very small area but store a large share of buried carbon Çayırlar okyanus tabanının yalnızca küçük bir kısmını kaplamasına rağmen her yıl okyanus tortullarına gömülen karbonun yaklaşık yüzde onunu oluşturur.

58 E efforts to restore seagrass can be successful in suitable conditions Son cümleye göre birkaç ülkedeki restorasyon projeleri, koşullar iyileştiğinde deniz çayırlarının hızla toparlanabildiğini göstermiştir.

59 B the unused processing capacity of private individuals' computers Gönüllü bilgi işlem, sıradan insanların bilgisayarlarının boş işlem gücünü kullanarak büyük bilimsel hesaplamalar yapma yöntemidir.

60 E one of the first and most famous examples of volunteer computing Bu proje, en eski ve en bilinen gönüllü bilgi işlem projelerinden biri olarak verilir; dünya çapında milyonlarca kişi katılmıştır.

61 E can be split into many separate parts that do not depend on each other Yöntem en iyi, bir görevin birbiriyle iletişim kurması gerekmeyen çok sayıda küçük ve bağımsız parçaya bölünebildiği durumlarda işe yarar.

62 A some participants may send back data that is wrong Az sayıda katılımcı, kazara ya da kasıtlı olarak yanlış veri gönderebilir; bu yüzden sonuçlar kontrol edilmelidir.

63 D What's the main difference between the two of them? Kaan'ın iki iş arasındaki farkı (biri daha çok para veriyor, diğeri hayran olduğu bir şirket) açıklaması, Sude'nin aralarındaki temel farkı sorduğunu gösterir.

64 D How much time do you spend looking at a screen each day? Hastanın 'Aslında oldukça fazla; günde dokuz saat bilgisayar başındayım' cevabı, doktorun ekrana ne kadar baktığını sorduğunu gösterir.

65 B Why don't we go and see some local bands at smaller venues instead? Merve'nin 'İyi fikir; küçük mekânlarda atmosfer zaten daha iyi olur' cevabı, Onur'un küçük mekânlarda yerel grupları izlemeyi önerdiğini gösterir.

66 B Mainly because I admire your commitment to reducing environmental impact. Görüşmecinin 'Sürdürülebilirlik stratejimizin önemli bir parçası' cevabı, adayın şirketin çevresel taahhüdünden söz ettiğini gösterir.

67 A Not yet, I'm afraid. I still need to add the latest figures. Arda'nın 'Merak etme, toplantı perşembeye ertelendi; bir günün daha var' cevabı ve Zehra'nın rahatlayıp raporu yarın akşama hazır edeceğini söylemesi, raporun henüz bitmediğini gösterir. Raporun bittiğini söyleyen seçenekler bu akışla çelişir.

68 B The hotel was far less comfortable than the brochure had made it seem. 'not nearly as comfortable as' = 'çok daha az rahat'.

69 D Passengers must never leave their luggage without anyone watching it. 'On no account should ...' = 'hiçbir koşulda ... yapmamalı', yani asla.

70 D Because the museum attracts so many people, it is recommended that tickets be booked ear… 'so popular that visitors are advised to book well in advance' = 'çok popüler olduğu için biletlerin erkenden alınması önerilir'.

71 B Although I greatly respect her work, I do not accept her most recent conclusions. 'Much as I admire ...' = 'ne kadar takdir etsem de' (Although I greatly respect ...).

72 C Studies have shown that wearing a helmet can reduce the risk of serious head injury by m… Boşluktan sonraki 'Despite this evidence' ifadesi, boşluğa kaskın etkililiğine dair bir kanıt cümlesinin gelmesini gerektirir.

73 B In recent years, however, the town has begun to reinvent itself as a destination for tou… Boşluktan sonra madencilik binalarının müzeye dönüştürülmesi ve turistlerin gelmesi anlatılır; boşluğa kasabanın turizm merkezi olarak yeniden doğuşunu tanıtan 'In recent years, however, ...' cümlesi gelmelidir.

74 E They do this using thousands of special cells in their skin called chromatophores. Boşluktan sonraki 'Each of these cells' ifadesi, boşluğa bu hücreleri (kromatoforlar) tanıtan cümlenin gelmesini gerektirir.

75 A In reality, however, science rarely works this way. Boşluk yaygın bir imge (yalnız deha) ile gerçeği (büyük ekipler) karşılaştıran cümleler arasındadır; 'In reality, however, science rarely works this way' geçişi sağlar.

76 D (IV) The Nile is the longest river in Africa. Parça Sahra'nın geçmişte yeşil olduğunu ve nasıl çöle dönüştüğünü anlatır. IV. cümle Nil'in uzunluğuna geçerek akışı bozar.

77 B (II) Breakfast is often described as the most important meal of the day. Parça gece geç yemek yemenin kilo üzerindeki etkisini anlatır. II. cümle kahvaltının önemine geçerek akışı bozar; III. cümledeki 'however' I. cümledeki inanca bağlanır.

78 E (V) Paris has one of the oldest underground railway systems in the world. Parça Eyfel Kulesi'nin yapılışını ve korunmasını anlatır. V. cümle Paris metrosuna geçerek konudan sapar.

DENEME 10 · ÇÖZÜMLER

1 A condemned Sakinlerin tedavi için bir saatten fazla yol gitmek zorunda kalacak olması, kararın 'kınandığını' (condemned) gösterir. 'welcomed' ve 'celebrated' anlamı tersine çevirir.

2 D distinguish 'distinguish A from B' (A'yı B'den ayırt etmek) kalıbı ve 'although ... almost identical' zıtlığı bu anlamı destekler. 'confuse' anlamı tersine çevirir.

3 D threat 'pose a threat to' (… için tehdit oluşturmak) sabit eşdizimidir ve yanlış bilginin olumsuz etkisini anlatır.

4 A extensive Resmî rehberi yazmak için açık seçenek olması bilgisinin 'kapsamlı, geniş' (extensive) olduğunu gösterir. Diğerleri yetersizlik bildirir.

5 C work out Hırsızların binaya nasıl girdiğini 'çözmek, anlamak' 'work out' ile anlatılır. Diğer phrasal verb'ler 'how' yan cümlesiyle bu anlamı vermez.

6 C earned 'earn a reputation for' (… diye ün kazanmak) sabit eşdizimidir. 'quickly' ile birlikte yeni yöneticinin kısa sürede ün kazandığını anlatır.

7 B had been trapped Kurtarma ekibinin ulaşmasından önce on iki saat süren ve işçilerin sıkışmış olduğu durum: past perfect passive 'had been trapped'.

8 C to sign 'be expected to + yalın fiil' gelecekte beklenen bir eylemi anlatır: 'to sign'. 'to have signed' geçmişe dönük bir beklenti bildirir.

9 A where Boşluktan sonra tam cümle gelir ve 'house' bir yer bildirir: 'where'. 'which' ve 'that' kullanılsaydı cümle sonunda 'in' gerekirdi.

10 B Unless Yatırım yapılmazsa rakiplerin gerisinde kalınacağı anlatılır: olumsuz koşul 'Unless'. 'Provided that' ve 'As long as' anlamı tersine çevirir.

11 D did he notice 'Not until' ile başlayan cümlede ana cümle devrik olur: 'did he notice'.

12 D left Belgeler masada 'bırakılmış' olduğu için edilgen anlamlı kısaltılmış ilgi cümlesi gerekir: 'left on the desk'.

13 B complaining 'It's no use + -ing' (… yapmanın faydası yok) kalıbı -ing biçimi ister.

14 D grew İnsanların varsaydığı şey geçmişteki bir durumdur: 'she grew up in Britain'. Ana fiil (assume) geniş zamanda olduğu için geçmiş olay simple past ile verilir.

15 B was 'Neither of + çoğul isim' resmî İngilizcede tekil fiil alır; 'were rejected' ile uyumlu geçmiş zaman 'was' doğrudur.

16 C on / on 'focus on' (… üzerine odaklanmak) ve 'the effects of A on B' (A'nın B üzerindeki etkileri) kalıpları 'on' ister.

17 D compared with Kent tilkilerinin kırsal akrabalarına 'kıyasla' değişmeye başladığı anlatılır: 'compared with'.

18 E which Virgülden sonra önceki bilgiye (kafatası şeklindeki farklılıklar) gönderme yapan ve özne olan ilgi zamiri 'which' olur.

19 C that 'the only animals' ifadesinden sonra özne görevindeki ilgi zamiri olarak 'that' tercih edilir.

20 B because Değişimlerin hızlı olmasının nedeni kentlerin belirli özellikleri kayıran yeni zorluklar sunmasıdır: 'because'.

21 A while Bilim insanlarının bakışı ile bazı sakinlerin bakışı karşılaştırılır: 'while' (… -iken).

22 D with the result that Herkesin kaynağı mümkün olduğunca kullanmasının sonucu, aşırı kullanımın onu herkes için yok etmesidir: sonuç bildiren 'with the result that'. 'in order that' ve 'so as to' amaç, 'as long as' ve 'provided that' koşul bildirir.

23 E however Ostrom'un bu görüşe itiraz etmesi önceki cümleyle zıtlık oluşturur: 'however'.

24 B without Toplulukların ne devlete ne özel mülkiyete 'dayanmadan' kaynakları yönettiği anlatılır: 'without relying on'.

25 A who 'those' (… olanlar; insanlar) özne görevindeki 'who' ile nitelenir.

26 E than 'more effective than' karşılaştırma yapısı 'than' ile tamamlanır.

27 A Although most of her colleagues considered the idea absurd 'refused to give up' (vazgeçmeyi reddetti) bir direnci ima eder: meslektaşlarının çoğu fikri saçma bulsa da. 'Since her theory had been accepted by all' durumunda vazgeçmeyi reddetmeye gerek kalmazdı.

28 C so that young families are not forced to leave the city Sözün amacı: genç ailelerin şehri terk etmek zorunda kalmaması (so that). 'even though there is no shortage' çelişkilidir.

29 E they would probably make greater efforts to reduce it İkinci tip koşul (were) ana cümlede 'would + yalın fiil' ister: muhtemelen azaltmak için daha fazla çaba gösterirlerdi.

30 C though some critics felt that its narration was too dramatic Övgüye bir çekince eklenir: bazı eleştirmenler anlatımın fazla dramatik olduğunu düşündü. 'which had been filmed' öncüle mantıklı biçimde bağlanmaz (photography filme alınmaz).

31 A Since the body loses a great deal of fluid through sweating Bol su içmenin gerekçesi: vücut terleme yoluyla çok sıvı kaybeder. Diğerleri gerekçe sunmaz ya da zaman uyumunu bozar.

32 C that people who left as children hardly recognise it when they return 'so much ... that' sonuç kalıbıdır: o kadar değişti ki çocukken ayrılanlar döndüklerinde onu zor tanıyorlar.

33 D especially as they collect vast amounts of personal data Uzmanların görüşünün gerekçesi: özellikle büyük miktarda kişisel veri topladıkları için. 'although most users never read' de anlamlı görünse de gerekçe değil, ilgisiz bir zıtlık sunar ve 'should do more' ile mantıksal bağı zayıftır.

34 C as soon as the results of her blood test had come back normal Eve gitme koşulu/zamanı: kan testi sonuçları normal çıkar çıkmaz. 'unless ... will be able' zaman uyumunu bozar.

35 A some modern devices capture several images at once and combine them 'Whereas' iki şeyi karşılaştırır: geleneksel kameralar tek görüntü kaydederken bazı modern cihazlar birden çok görüntü yakalayıp birleştirir.

36 E can countries hope to tackle a problem as complex as climate change 'Only by ...' ile başlayan cümlede ana cümle devrik olur: 'can countries hope to tackle'.

37 D Yeni aşıya olan talep o kadar büyüktü ki fabrikalar bu talebi karşılamak için günde yirm… 'So great was the demand ... that factories had to operate twenty-four hours a day' = 'talep o kadar büyüktü ki fabrikalar günde yirmi dört saat çalışmak zorunda kaldı'.

38 C Bazı eğitimciler, okullarda akıllı telefonları yasaklamak yerine öğrencilere onları soru… 'Rather than banning ...' = '... yasaklamak yerine'; 'should be taught how to use them responsibly' = 'onları sorumlu bir şekilde kullanmanın öğretilmesi gerektiği'.

39 A Tarihçiler, Orta Çağ insanlarının Dünya'nın düz olduğunu düşündüğüne dair yaygın inancı … 'have found little evidence to support the popular belief that ...' = '... dair yaygın inancı destekleyen pek az kanıt bulmuştur'. İkinci seçenek 'little' yerine 'pek çok' diyerek anlamı tersine çevirir.

40 C The research shows that older individuals who read books regularly are less likely to ex… 'düzenli olarak kitap okuyan yaşlı bireylerin ... olasılığının daha düşük olduğunu' = 'older individuals who read books regularly are less likely to experience cognitive decline'.

43 B keep swimming, breathing and watching for danger while resting Bir yarıküre dinlenirken diğeri uyanık kalır; böylece hayvan yüzmeye devam edebilir, nefes almak için yüzeye çıkabilir ve yırtıcıları gözetleyebilir.

44 E they have to decide consciously when to breathe Metne göre yunuslar, insanlardan farklı olarak isteyerek nefes alır; tamamen uyurlarsa nefes almayı bırakıp boğulabilirler.

45 E some birds use one-sided sleep to stay alert to possible threats Grubun kenarında uyuyan ördeklerin gruptan uzağa bakan gözlerini açık tutması, yaklaşan tehlikeyi fark etmek için tek yarıküre uykusunu kullandıklarını gösterir.

46 A help them understand why sleep is necessary at all Araştırmacılar, beynin bir yarısının dinlenirken diğerinin nasıl çalıştığını anlamanın uykunun temel amacına ışık tutacağını umar.

47 B activity in the part of the brain that responds to rewards Beyin görüntüleme çalışmaları ürpertilerin beynin ödül sistemindeki etkinlik ve dopamin salınımıyla ilişkili olduğunu göstermiştir.

48 B both before and at the most emotional moment of the music Dopamin yalnızca duygusal yoğunluğun zirvesinde değil, dinleyicinin olacakları beklediği öncesindeki anlarda da salınır.

49 A A sudden change in how loud the music is Metne göre ürpertiler genellikle ses düzeyinde ani bir değişiklik, yeni bir enstrümanın girişi ya da alışılmadık bir armoni gibi beklenmedik değişikliklerle tetiklenir.

50 D they are open to new experiences or have memories connected with the music Deneyime açıklık özelliği yüksek olanların ve şarkıyla ilişkili kişisel anıları olanların ürperti hissetme olasılığı daha yüksektir.

51 A the equipment needed to read it had not yet been developed Metne göre o dönemde barkodları güvenilir biçimde okuyacak teknoloji yoktu ve buluş yirmi yıldan fazla kullanılmadan kaldı.

52 C got the idea while drawing in the sand Mucitlerden biri fikri bir kumsalda kuma çizgiler çizerken bulduğunu söylemiştir.

53 D shops could monitor precisely which products were sold Metne göre barkodların belki de en önemli etkisi, mağazaların tam olarak neyin satıldığını takip edebilmesiydi.

54 B contain more information and can be scanned with smartphones Son cümleye göre iki boyutlu kodlar çok daha fazla bilgi depolayabilir ve sıradan akıllı telefonlarla okunabilir.

55 A nature has already developed solutions to many engineering problems Biyomimikrinin temel öncülü, milyonlarca yıllık evrimle şekillenen canlıların mühendislerin karşılaştığı sorunların birçoğunu zaten çözmüş olmasıdır.

56 E the bird can enter water while making very little splash Yalıçapkını, suya çok az sıçrama ile dalan bir kuştur; trenin burnu bu gagaya benzetilerek tasarlanmıştır.

57 E design buildings that need less artificial cooling Mimarlar, dışarıdaki aşırı sıcağa rağmen iç sıcaklığı sabit tutan termit tepelerini daha az klima gerektiren binalar tasarlamak için incelemiştir.

58 B a design inspired by nature is not necessarily good for the environment Eleştirmenlere göre doğadan bir biçimi kopyalamak bir ürünü otomatik olarak çevre dostu yapmaz; malzemeler ve üretim süreci de önemlidir.

59 B new roads encourage more people to drive Yeni ya da genişletilmiş yollar araç kullanmayı daha cazip hâle getirir ve daha fazla kişi araba kullanmaya başlar; buna 'teşvik edilmiş talep' denir.

60 C some of the traffic disappeared as people changed their behaviour Yollar kapatıldığında ya da daraltıldığında trafik eşit miktarda başka yerlere kaymamış, insanlar alışkanlıklarını değiştirdikçe bir kısmı ortadan kalkmıştır.

61 B a reduction in traffic when road space is reduced 'Ters etki', yol kapasitesi azaltıldığında trafiğin de azalmasıdır; yeni yolların trafiği artırmasının tersidir.

62 E promoting alternatives to driving and managing demand Birçok şehir artık toplu taşıma, bisiklet ve yürüyüşü iyileştirmeye ve trafik ücreti gibi önlemlerle talebi yönetmeye odaklanmaktadır.

63 B Really? What are you planning to do during that time? Ece'nin yıl boyunca ne yapacağını (çalışmak ve seyahat etmek) anlatan cevabı, Mert'in bu süre içinde ne yapmayı planladığını sorduğunu gösterir.

64 A Would you like a refund or an exchange? Müşterinin 'Değişim tercih ederim' cevabı, görevlinin iade mi değişim mi istediğini sorduğunu gösterir.

65 E How long have you had the old one? Doruk'un 'Yaklaşık beş yıl' cevabı, Selin'in eski bilgisayarın ne kadar süredir onda olduğunu sorduğunu gösterir.

66 D What exactly is wrong with it? Öğretmenin sonucun neden zayıf olduğunu açıklayan cevabı, öğrencinin tam olarak neyin yanlış olduğunu sorduğunu gösterir.

67 E No, I didn't. When does the ban come into effect? Leyla'nın 'Gelecek ocaktan itibaren' cevabı, Tarık'ın yasağın ne zaman yürürlüğe gireceğini sorduğunu gösterir. Tarık'ın sonradan 'İyi' demesi, yasağa karşı olduğunu söyleyen seçenekle çelişir.

68 E Without the backing of local communities, the new policy will probably fail. 'unlikely to succeed unless it receives support' = 'destek olmadan muhtemelen başarısız olur'.

69 A The engineers spent three years designing a bridge capable of resisting powerful earthqu… 'It took the engineers three years to design' = 'mühendisler tasarlamak için üç yıl harcadı'; 'could withstand' = 'capable of resisting'.

70 E I was very surprised to see him at the conference. 'the last person I expected to see' = 'görmeyi en son bekleyeceğim kişi', yani onu orada görmek büyük bir sürprizdi.
